Move Expected To Bring End of Ban on Pleasure Use of Cars In East.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Informed sources indicated the Office of Price Administration would announce officially late today its pproposed changes in gasoline rations in the east and the midwest and, presumably, the end of the ban on pleasure driving in the east.

Gas ration coupons may be worth only three gallons each to motorists throughout Ohio and the middle west after midnight next Sunday as Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes moves to equalize rationing from the east coast to the Rocky Mountains, it was revealed today in Chicago.

News of the 25 per cent reduction in rations was released by Raymond S. McKeough, regional OPA administrator in Chicago, who said he could not discuss details of the anticipated equalization move.

It is expected that A, B, and C coupons, now worth four gallons each in the midwest, will be reduced by one gallon in the middle west so the eastern states can have a slight increase in their rations which now give them only one and one-half gallons a week on A cards and two and one-half for B and C cards.

Although the pleasure driving ban appeared nearly at an end in the east, there was no indication that eastern motorists will get more than three gallons a week on their A cards, if that much. The Office of Price Administration revealed that it has been under considerable pressure from eastern congressmen to ease the gas rationing restrictions.

Meanwhile, State Senator Earle

Charges Highway Employes Get Out Paper for Bender

BULLETIN

Lending some credence to charges published by the Cleveland Press that Cuyahoga county Republican ward leaders and precinct committeemen on state highway pay department pay rolls were being used for political purposes, Don C. Power, executive secretary to Gov. John Bricker, said today that state road employes who were also precinct committeemen "resigned either one job or the other" before irregularities in the Cleveland division were published.

Continuing in a series of articles in which it accuses the state administration of using the highway department for political purposes, the Cleveland Press today had charged that George H. Bender, chairman of the Cuyahoga county Republican central committee was using full-time highway employes to carry on private enterprise.

The Press charged that instead of hiring and paying personnel to get out his own newspaper, the National Republican, Bender drafted highway employes to do the work.

Meanwhile Gov. John W. Bricker whom the Press linked with Bender in its first article dealing with political activity within the highway department, today said the Cuyahoga county division was being operated "efficiently and economically."

The governor, the United Press reported, said he found no evi-

STUDY MOVE

City Employes, Union Backers To Discuss Pay Hike Delay.

Mansfield city employes and their labor organization backers probably will decide at a meeting next Wednesday night on their next move to get pay increases for the city workers, Rudy Schneider, A. F. L. chairman, announced today.

Schneider said his organization had been invited to meet with C. I. O. men and representatives of city workers in a session which is expected to be at one of the labor halls.

Council apparently is afraid to air this salary increase question publicly, but labor can do something about it at the fall election," Schneider said. Recalling that four of the nine members of council are unopposed, Schneider said "We still haven't forgotten how to write in names."

Council, meeting in closed committee session Tuesday night, decided to defer action on the pay increase requests until the 1944 budget is prepared.

EIGHT SEEKING POSTMASTER'S APPOINTMENT

Civil Service at Washington Reveals Candidates For Mansfield Position.

Eight Mansfielders today were in the race—if it can be called a race—for the position of postmaster.

This was revealed for the first time today in an Associated Press dispatch from Washington which listed the names of the persons who have filed applications to take the examination for the position, which pays $4,200 per year, and which has been left vacant by the death of Herman E. Homberger.

The dispatch listed the following candidates: Frank Cave, now acting postmaster; Clifford O. Lister, William DeHart, Glenwood E. Coffman, Lawrence W. Mumford, David D Lantz, Fred E. Lingafelter and Robert W Dunson.

Of the eight, three are now postal clerks—Lister, DeHart and Mumford.

Competitors are not required to take a specific examination, but are rated according to education, business experience, qualifications and suitability, accordingo to civil service regulations.

Inspectors from the civil service commission in Washington, D. C., will interview applicants and references. It could not be learned today when the interviews would begin.

The investigation of the civil service commission covers two purposes; first, inquiry as to the applicants suitability and fitness for the office with respect to his reputation and personal characteristics, and second, careful inquiry of persons best qualified to know of his ability, business qualifications and experience and success in business or other employment.

Following the investigations, the competitors are graded by the inspectors and rated accordingly by the Civil Service Commission. The ratings are then given to the president, who makes the appointment, which must be approved by the senate.

Three of the candidates seeking the job are not registered voters, election board officials revealed today, while one has not declared his party and the remaining four are Democrats. Dunson, Lantz, and Lister are not registered. Mumford has not voted in a primary election at which he has to state his party. DeHart, Cave Coffman, and Lingafelter, are all registered Democrats.

Cave, Cooktown-Grange road, chairman of the Richland county executive Democratic committee, has been acting postmaster since July 1. He is also a real estate dealer and former speaker in the Ohio house of representatives.

DeHart, 622 Arlington avenue, received his appointment as postal clerk in 1922 while Mumford has been there since 1921 and Lister since 1939.

Lingafelter, 92 Glenwood Heights, has been secretary of the city water department for eight years. He is also former occupational tax collector of the county. Lantz, who lives on Bowman street road, was common pleas court bailiff under Judge C. H. Huston until February of this year. Since then he has been employed at the Tappan Stove company.

Dunson lives at 205 Marlowe road. He is employed in the purchasing department of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

Jury Starts Deliberations In Weekley-Reed Slander Case

A jury of seven women and five men began deliberation this morning on the $10,000 slander suit brought by Willard S. Weekley, former superintendent of Butler schools, against Dr. John A. Reed, Butler physician.

The jury retired at 10 a. m. following Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch's charge that it was to decide only whether members believed the doctor had made the statements alleged by the plaintiff in his amended petition.

In his charge Judge Kalbfleisch instructed the jury that the alleged statements were slanderous in themselves and as such the plaintiff had not been required to prove malice, falsity or damage. He noted that the law presumes that there is malice, that the statements are false and that there has been damage to the reputation when the statements are of a "per se" nature.

"If you decide in favor of the plaintiff, meaning that you find the preponderance of evidence to show that the alleged statements were made, the amount of damages to be awarded to the plaintiff is at your discretion," he said.

"You must consider the age, the family and social relationships the occupation and official position of the plaintiff. You must consider his mental anguish, the standing of the defendant or the weight of his opinion, and reasonable attorney fees in deciding the amount of damages," Judge Kalbfleisch counseled.

He added that further compensation known as punitive damages might be granted as punishment of the defendant. These, he noted,

CAPT. CHARLES KOLLMAN

Honors Pile Up for Marine Dive Bomber, Mansfield Guest

By DOROTHY HAINER

Only 23 years of age, but he's already a captain in the U. S. Marine Air Corps; has won the Distinguished Flying Cross, the President's squadron citation and several other awards.

That only begins to tell the story of Capt. Charles Kollman of the marine corps who is visiting here at the home of Municipal Judge and Mrs. H. H. Schettler, 139 Glenwood boulevard. A cousin of Mrs. Schettler's, his home is in Youngstown where he was employed in a metallurgical laboratory before entering the armed service.

Capt. Kollman joined the armed forces two years ago, took his flight training at Corpus Christi, Tex., and received his wings in the naval air corps. He was transferred to the Marine corps and commissioned a second lieutenant before being sent overseas. Subsequent promotions came while he was based on Guadalcanal.

Stationed in the Solomons for 10 months, he saw plenty of action in the marine dive bomber which he piloted. Dive bombers carry only a two-man crew, the pilot and an enlisted man who acts as gunner.

Capt. Kollman said most of the time was spent on reconnaissance missions searching for enemy surface craft and consequently most of the fighting was done over the wide expanses of the Pacific far from land.

A modest young man, heavily tanned from the equatorial sun, Capt. Kollman appeared slightly embarrassed when questioned

FDR Promises Liberty After War To Philippines.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Philippines won their right to independence by the fight the natives put up on Bataan, says President Roosevelt. Furthermore, the islands will "soon be redeemed from the Japanese yoke."

In these words, Mr. Roosevelt spoke last night to the Filipino people on the 45th anniversary of American Occupation of the far Pacific territory.

The moment the Japanese are ousted, said the president, the Philippines will have their own republican government. By their battle against the Japanese in December, 1941 and for weeks thereafter, they "gave final proof that here was a nation fit to be respected," he declared.

The Philippine government will have a voice in the peace, Mr. Roosevelt added.

Twins Missing, New Degenerate Attack Feared

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Two 13-year-old twin boys, missing from their west side home overnight, were sought today in a Cleveland suburb where police found nine-year-old Jack Buchanan, who had been abducted and attacked by a sex degenerate.

The missing twins are James and Charles Collins, sons of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Collins. They apparently disappeared on the way from their home to the Lakewood Country club in Westlake where they are caddies.

Cleveland and suburban police searched fields and woods in Westlake, Rocky River, Fairview and Bay village. Fear was expressed that the same man who assaulted the Buchanan boy, son of City Food Inspector E. B. Buchanan, had abducted the twins. Collins, a construction employe, and his wife said they had received no word from their sons since they left home at 10 a. m. yesterday.

The Buchanan boy remained under treatment at a hospital where he gave a fragmentary account of his abduction. He reported a man in a blue car offered him a ride after he left his home to go to Lakewood Park Wednesday. Police found the boy, dazed and bleeding in a field at Westlake village yesterday.

Allied Planes Take Heavy Toll of Axis Forces Fleeing From Sicily.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(INS)—The main force of American troops advancing east of Orlando in Sicily today established full contact with a new United States landing party which flanked the Axis lines on the north coast.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Allied authorities announced today that the U. S. Seventh army had captured Cape Orlando, the German coastal stronghold which was outflanked by an American landing from the sea Wednesday.

The fall of the cape, little more than 40 miles west of Messina, came after American troops to the east and west had established a junction and overrun the adjacent towns of Naso and Brolo.

Axis prisoners now exceed 130,000, it was announced.

The Americans under Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., sprang forward eight miles along the northern coast through Cape Orlando while the British Eighth army advanced four miles on the east coast, threatening Taormina.

Both Allied wings were within 35 miles of Messina, whose beaches were the scene of an increasing enemy evacuation movement to Italy.

Randazzo, the central anchor of the Germans' rear guard line, was menaced from the flank as American infantrymen surged forward over the northern ring of mountains.

Naso lies two miles south of the tip of Cape Orlando; Brolo is four miles east of the cape. The operations involved crossing of the Naso river, the communique said.

Both at the center and on the

Stalin Says He Didn't Get A Bid

Announcement Taken As Hint Soviets Will Go Own Way.

BULLETIN

QUEBEC — (INS) — United States and British officials in Quebec for the forthcoming Roosevelt-Churchill military conferences appeared today to be taking an increasingly serious view of the Russian assertion that Premier Joseph Stalin had not been invited to the discussions.

(By International News Service)

QUEBEC, Que., — As Prime Minister Winston Churchill sped to an "unannounced destination" today following a brief visit to Niagara Falls, N. Y., speculation developed concerning the latest news from the Kremlin.

Announcement by Joseph Stalin that he had not been invited to the projected military conferences between Churchill and President Roosevelt was seen by some to cast a new light on the forthcoming discussions. Other international observers, however, regarded it merely as a Soviet move to dispel possible belief that Stalin had turned down a request to participate in the eventful meeting.

Only three days ago in Washington, President Roosevelt had told his news conference that Stalin's absence from the Quebec discussions did not mean that he and Churchill would not have been happy to welcome him.

The announcement, carried by the official Russian news agency, represented the latest in a series of events which have given

Strong Fighting Marks Drive To Retake Bryansk From Germans.

LONDON — Russian troops tightened their hold around Kharkov today by smashing inward from a point less than five miles away while to the north a drive against Bryansk was stepped up in strength.

In strong fighting for Bryansk, the Moscow midnight communique said, the red forces have engulfed the important German stronghold of Dmitrovsky Orlovsky and 119 populated places south and east of Karachev, which straddles the rail line between captured Orel and Bryansk.

Storming in toward Kharkov, Soviet forces to the south have taken the town of Chuguev, 22 miles distant. The Moscow announcement, recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said the

Bigger and Better Bombings Due for Japs In Pacific

(By Associated Press)

Japan, fearful that a second U. S. attack on her Kurile island chain presaged raids on the Japanese mainland itself, has been warned by an American air commander that even greater aerial blows are to come in the Pacific.

Maj. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, commander of air activities in the Solomons, asserted that there would be no let-up, and that the Pacific offensive had reached "the second quarter of the game with our forces possessing the ball and with an impressive score behind them."

Japan's Kurile islands, 1,200 miles northeast of Tokyo, were raided yesterday (far Pacific time) by big Liberator bombers which shot down five of 40 enemy defenders.

Senator Taft to Meet G. O. P. Leaders, Talk Here Sept. 2

Senator Robert A. Taft will speak in Mansfield Sept. 2, according to an announcement made today by Ralph Hardy, chairman of the Richland county Republican executive committee.

Tentative plans for Taft's visit include a reception during the afternoon at which time interested persons may meet and talk with the senator and an open meeting in the evening at which the senator will discuss current issues.

He will come to Mansfield after a noon speaking engagement in Mt. Gilead, Hardy was informed by J. Harry McGregor who made the arrangements for the visit.

Hardy said times and places of the meetings will be decided later when the committee has learned the details of Taft's plans. He will discuss current issues during his two appearances in the city, the chairman said.

Taft, now serving his second term in the U. S. senate, was in Mansfield in the fall of 1940 during his campaign for re-election.

HUGE U. S. AIR FLEET BEARS OUT WARNING

Railroad Yards Smashed By Fortresses, Low-Level Bombing Planes.

BERLIN ALSO HIT

RAF Mosquitoes Bite Hitler's Capital; Turin and Milan Heavily Raided.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—A huge fleet of American bombers again bombed Rome today, destructively emphasizing the recent warning to Italian people that mass Allied raids were about to be resumed.

The fleet of American bombers, including Flying Fortresses, Mitchells and Marauders, attacked the Italian capital before noon, it was announced with the railroad freight yards again the principal targets.

Rome was first bombed in a daylight raid by American precision bombers on July 19.

Behind the wave of Fortresses in today's raid came the lighter Mitchells and Marauders, bombing from low levels and pouring their tracers into the center of an already burning area.

The raid probably equalled the first in size, when Allied air commanders put into the air the greatest aerial concentration since the beginning of the Mediterranean campaign.

As far as was known, no statement of explanation was radioed to the Italian people this time as was done before.

The new attack was a warning that the Allied threat to bomb Rome again would be maintained.

A special air communique, which did not give all the details given in later announcements, said:

"Strong forces of heavy and medium bombers of the northwest African air forces today attacked marshalling yards at Rome."

The raid on the Italian capital was disclosed shortly after London announced that Britain-based bombers, attacking northern Italy in greater strength than ever before, raided Milan and Turin last night.

At the same time, swift RAF Mosquitos struck at Berlin, so

Army Has Plan To Reimburse Contractors, If War Ends.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The war department has made plans to reimburse its contractors in case of a sudden end to the war.

Disclosure of the plans was made in a War Production Board announcement yesterday that army purchases of blankets and woolens would be cut substantially in 1944.

Maj. Gen. C. L. Corbin, director of procurement in the quartermaster's office, was quoted as advising a group of woolen and worsted manufacturers here this week that "present contracts will be completed unless unforeseen circumstances such as a sudden termination of hostilities—make a different course advisable." No cancellation of existing contracts is contemplated, he said.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Well! I'll be eternally gin-swizzled!" Dicky exclaimed. "I thought there was something queer about it but I couldn't tell what! Do you think you can find the switch or spring or whatever it is that controls it?"

"I'll try," I said. "Bring it over to the light."

I looked at the bag carefully, then began to explore the sides and bottom. At last, I touched the right spring, and the bottom of the bag rose vertically in two pieces revealing a closely packed cavity beneath.

"For the love of Abraham and all his descendants!" Dicky breathed. "Look at this!"

It resembled a physician's bag in part. There were rolls of bandages, scissors, gauze, adhesive tape. But there were also things such as I had seen in Halloran's make up bag, and several bottles of liquid. These Dicky took out, opened, sniffed gingerly, and replaced.

But at once his face paled.

A Powerful Supply.

"That, little one, believe it or not, is chloroform enough to put two or three people out of business," he told me.

"How much time have we?" I asked, and Dicky looked at me curiously.

"You don't seem to be disturbed by the chloroform bottle," he commented.

"I'm too interested in the other stuff," I said. "Have we time to get Halloran up here to look at this?"

"I think so," he replied, and went to the telephone.

"Halloran?" he said, when he had been connected with the room where I had left the make up man. "Please come up to 1720 right away. We'll be waiting for you."

We spent the interval of waiting in examining the other bottles, some of which were plainly drugs.

"Sedatives I'm sure," I said, "and powerful enough to keep anybody under once the chloroform had got in its initial work."

Halloran Arrives.

"I'd like to know what she was planning," Dicky said. "Something devilish you may be sure. But here's Halloran."

The make-up man came into the room, examined the contents of the false compartment with a knowing air.

"Good make-up stuff," he said at last. "She could have turned anybody into someone entirely different. See!" — he opened a parcel at the side of the bag— "there's even an auburn wig here in the lastest style hairdo."

"Well," Dicky said, "we can't discover anything more so we'll get these things back just as in place. If Halloran can get up that wig again so she won't spot it's been handled?"

"I'll try," Halloran answered, and when he had successfully completed his task, Dicky thanked him warmly.

Saved His Life.

"You've saved my life!" he declared, "but I think it will be safer if you go back down to the fifteenth floor again. I'll bring Mrs Graham down as soon as it's safe for her to leave here."

"I'll be waiting," Halloran said, "and I'm glad to be of service."

"Nice little chap," Dicky commented when he was out of hearing, "but I think we can work faster without him. Now, have you a mental picture of everything this bag contains?"

"I think I have," I told him.

"And can you put them back again so the dame won't spot anybody's been monkeying with her property?"

"I'm fairly certain I can," I said, and Dicky gave a relieved little whistle.

"Then go to it, with my blessing, and this handkerchief," he said. "Don't take any chance on fingerprints. She's probably an expert. I won't tell you to hurry."

Replaces Contents.

"Thank you," I said demurely, but hurried as fast I could with safety through the process of putting the things into the false compartment, shutting that down, making sure that the spring was properly caught, and then laying the articles of clothing back into the bag. I took a last searching glance at it, and turned confidently to my husband.

"I am sure it's foolproof," I said.

"Good!" he commented and handkerchief in hand snapped the lock shut and set the bag back in its place, calling on me to be sure that it was exactly in the place from which he had taken it.

Then we hurried stealthily out of the room and no sooner had gained the shelter of Dicky's than the telephone sounded. He answered it, said "Okay!" and turned to me.

"She's on her way up. Get out into the hall, quick!"

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, August 14

Sudden, stirring and breath-taking events are forecast from the prevailing mutual and lunar aspects on this day. It is one of those times in which to "expect the unexpected" and grasp whatever great fortune or unpredictable turn of the affairs, may present itself. All phases of life may be involved, but with the emphasis on the romantic adventurous and extraordinary or revolutionary. Intuitions or "hunches" may play a major role in this whirlwind state of affairs. But don't be carried off your feet into vital errors or regrets. Keep poised and wary.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of the unusual, unprecedented and unpredictable, descending with lightning force and precipitancy on all the phases of life, personal as well as business. It is an uprooting force radical and far reaching, but of unforeseen benefits, favors and adventures. Elopements or startling matrimonial experiences may occur under this vibration. There are likewise mystical, spiritual, artistic and creative expressions, under inspirational urges, with the intuitions and strange leads dependable. But meantime don't be carried away to the extent of being duped or misled.

"The Authority on Authorities"

TRY YOUR OWN SUIT

When the opponents' bidding, plus your own holding, makes you suspect that your partner had opened the bidding with either a pure psychic or at least a badly shaded bid, it is often best to lead your own pretty fair suit against their No Trump contract, especially if you have only a singleton of his. When you hold something better than a trick in

	♠ 5 ♥ K Q 10 7 5 ♦ 8 4 2 ♣ J 10 3 2
♠ A K 9 2 ♥ J 9 8 4 ♦ 7 5 3 ♣ A K	N W E S	♠ Q 4 3 ♥ A 6 3 ♦ A J ♣ 9 8 6 5 4
	♠ J 10 8 7 6 ♥ 2 ♦ K Q 10 9 6 ♣ Q 7

Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	1 NT
Pass	3 NT

...higa cards, it is likely your partner would lack adequate re-entries to bring in his suit, in which the declarer has indicated he has no particular fears.

North led the spade 5, and thus helped the declarer, as this left him three entries to the dummy and eliminated any guess in the spade suit, the 10 falling to the A and a finesse against the J being virtually marked. It didn't take him long to plan. He saw four spade tricks and two in the red suit, plus maybe three or four in clubs. He scored the club tops, led the spade Q and sent a club to North. Unfortunately for North, the latter now chose the heart K instead of a diamond return. The A took this, a second club was given up to North, and game was now sure, as the spade finesse worked after the diamond A won the return.

Defense of this hand would have been easy if North had opened his heart K, and South's 2 on it had caused a sound switch to a diamond, either at once if the declarer ducked the first trick or later, when North first got the lead from either a club or a heart. That switch would have destroyed declarer's entire timing, and would have been virtually obligatory, instead of to a spade, when the spade Q was seen in dummy in addition to the stoppers proclaimed by West's bid of No Trumps.

S. Thomas Sinnickson, damaged by enemy action, according to information received by his parents today.

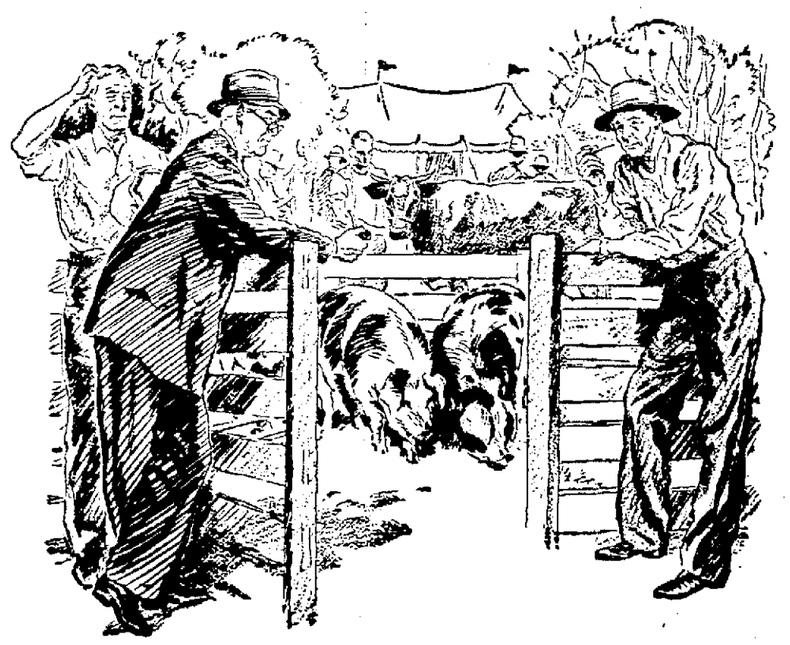
THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...



"Makes me feel extra good hearin' you talk that way, Judge...never realized I was contributin' to the war effort in the way you mention."

"You certainly are, Hank. Part of the grain you farmers grow is used by the beverage distilling industry to make alcohol for war purposes. Hundreds of millions of gallons are required every year for smokeless powder, medical supplies, chemical warfare materials, shatterproof glass, lacquer for camouflaging equipment, fuel to propel torpedoes and in the making of critically needed synthetic rubber. But, Hank, the grain used in distilling this alcohol is not thrown away. It is processed and comes back to the farm again in the form of distillers' dried grains or dried solubles which you use for dairy feeds, hog supplements and poultry mashes. This year alone it is estimated 388,000 tons of these much needed feed stuffs will be produced by the distillers."

"I can see now, Judge, why you say it's a mighty good thing we have a legal distilling industry in times like these."

TELEPHONE 4251-6

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

LONDON—(By Wireless)—Another piece of evidence indicating how far the war has turned is that the German radio this week has begun a personal attack on Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, chief of the RAF bomber command. The Nazi radio is now building him up as an ogre who is murdering German people. Nothing could more clearly reveal how much the Allied bombing is hurting the Nazis.

Clapper

Only this week I saw English workmen with picks tearing out brick, window walls from some buildings, these having been installed for protection during the blitz on London. While this removal is an index of the changed state of the war, I hope the British will not be too quick to remove all reminders of what the air war against them has been.

Air war is terrifying and brutal. That is one of the best things about it. At last we have the means of making cities uninhabitable, spreading a blight over ports, industrial areas, airfields, and—yes, why not be frank about it?—population areas. I have seen many blocks rendered uninhabitable around port areas in Africa and Sicily. At last war is being made so horrible for the civilian population that perhaps its ultimate stupidity will become clear.

For too long war has been a plaything of ambitious men, for too long it has been a convenient means by which politicians and dictators have resolved unemployment and other economic troubles, stifled opposition and grasped more power. For too long have such aggressive men been able to plunge other countries into unwanted wars—and of all the people who have a just complaint on this score Americans are the first.

Perhaps the mutual destructiveness of war as it is now being waged will goad the world to drive politicians and statesmen out of the historic habit of resorting to this insanity as the handiest panacea for their headaches. When the Nazis begin to cry that some of our people are brutal ogres, killing their people, perhaps we are beginning to be really effective. That is the best tip to us to lay it on heavier than ever, to bring in planes, crews, bombs, and send them out in ever larger force, still deeper into the vitals of Germany.

For years the German people have been making war on the rest of the western world, in other people's territory, and now they are getting a dose of it that has long been needed.

What I like about our side is the cool, calculating way we are going at this. Nothing is more touching than to see Air Chief Marshal Harris in his home, with the beautiful and young Lady Harris, and with their two-year-old daughter on his knee. Also there is nothing more terrifying than to be on the other end of that pair of blue eyes when they are turned on photographs of German targets. Nobody enjoys a vacation with his family at the beach more than Lieut. Gen. Carl Spaatz, the ranking American air officer in Africa. You should have seen one ecstatic young air general getting in the mail a snapshot of his four-year-old daughter and delaying his conference on the next raid until he had showed it to everybody and told everybody about her. In their personal relations these bombing chiefs may be reasonable, kind, shy, and have no more brutal impulses than a country parson. But their job is using this new weapon of mass destruction, and they are rightly making it as deadly and destructive as possible.

I am glad to report they are making most encouraging progress.

INTRA-LABOR BATTLE FEARED OVER CHARTER

AFL Flirts With Small Union of Mechanics as IAM Delays Split-up.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—A reported application from the Mechanics Educational Society of America (MESA) for the American Federation of Labor's charter rights over machinists foreshadowed today possible new jurisdictional warfare in the great aircraft-automobile industry.

President William Green said the AFL executive council would hold a hearing today on the MESA application.

The International Association of Machinists quit the AFL a few months ago, vacating the jcharter rights in the machine field. The divorce has not become final, psychologically speaking. Harvey Brown, IAM president, has said his machinists were still "AFL-minded" but wanted an equitable settlement of their row with the carpenters.

There are sideline suggestions that the AFL's flirtation with the MESA is bait to lure the big machinist's union back into the fold. The machinists claim a half-million members. The MESA claims only 40,000 to 45,000 members.

Green, answering a press conference question, denied the AFL had solicited an application from the Mechanics Educational Society. The society's membership is located principally in Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, and Elyria, O.

The AFL executive council declined yesterday to join the CIO political action committee in a co-operative enterprise and decided instead to pursue its traditional policy of setting up an independent political committee "to support our friends and oppose our enemies, regardless of party."

Green, who will head the committee, said members of congress who voted for the Connally-Smith anti-strike bill will be opposed vigorously.

A formal statement by the council said there was evidence that public opinion was turning against the act and added: "We hope that the members of congress who voted to enact this Fascist measure over the president's veto will weigh the results of their hasty action during their present vacation and be prepared to reconsider when they return to to Washington next month.

REPORTED DROP IN LIVING COST GETS THE BIRD

Labor Department Had Better Check Statistics Again, Say Housewives.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — That labor department report of a decline in food prices in cities sounded as pleasant as a shower in drought-time but, an unofficial survey showed today, it didn't soak in with a lot of the customers.

Many people in different parts of the country said they had not discerned any 2 per cent decrease, as the department reported for the mid June-mid July period. It may have been because their areas were not affected by the reported decline, or because they haven't been buying the items said to have lessened in cost.

But a Memphis housewife suggested the labor department was mistaken. She said "I think they'd better check their statistics again; prices just keep getting higher and higher."

Comments on Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins' announcement of a decline in food prices included the following from key cities:

New Orleans — President Lloyd Keller of the city's Retail Grocers association said that while meat prices dropped 5.8 per cent in the period covered, fresh fruits and vegetables gained 12.7 per cent.

Columbus, Ohio — Rep. Vorys (R.-Ohio) said he had talked with hundreds of consumers and distributors "and haven't heard any expression to bear out those figures." He said they were "a complete surprise to me" as "the trend here is toward rising costs."

Pittsburgh—"Yes," said a co-operative broker, "there might have been a decrease. Look how the cost of potatoes has dropped."

Richmond, Va.—Frank W. Whitlock, manager of an association of independent grocers—"I haven't seen any cutback in prices. I wish they'd prove to me that prices are dropping."

Los Angeles - Sam White, executive secretary of the Southern California Retail Grocers association 1,400 stores, said that "except for vegetables, which have shown a seasonal decline, I have seen no downward tendency."

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK -I have before me evidence of a conspiracy to blackout the picture and silence the very name of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker as a concession to the AFL and the CIO throughout Michigan during the campaign to raise money for the Red Cross last April. The campaign ran from April 1 to April 7 and the office of the Michigan district chairman of the nation-wide war activities committee of the motion picture industry, 1492 National Bank building, Detroit, sent out two mimeographed bulletins, addressed to all exhibitors in the state, the first one suggesting, the second one ordering, that Rickenbacker's presence and his name be eliminated from a film distributed as a patriotic appeal for contributions to the Red Cross. Both documents are signed, in typewriter, E. C. Beatty, Chairman.

Pegler

The second, and peremptory notice says "after a conference with Frank X. Martell, president of the Wayne County Federation of Labor, and C. Patrick Quinn, president of the Greater Detroit and Wayne County Congress of Industrial Organizations, to avoid any possible repercussion in connection with the Red Cross collections in all our theaters, I wish to impress on all exhibitors that the elimination of the showing of Captain Rickenbacker making the talk on your screen is an absolute must and that only the sound track is to be used."

The word "must" is underlined.

"We all wish to maintain friendly and cordial relations with all bona fide labor organizations," the document continues, "and inasmuch as the two gentlemen mentioned in this letter definitely represent all organized labor in this community, we have agreed on the running of a trailer as outlined above."

Apparanently Rickenbacker's voice was heard, but the war activities committee of the motion picture industry, which of course, has tremendous economic power over the theater owners, was unwilling to let the people know that they were hearing a patriotic appeal from one of the greatest American patriots. Among those on the committee are several of the most powerful Hollywood magnates.

On Oct. 12, 1938, Ralph E. Moody, assistant attorney general of Oregon, submitted a report to Gov. Charles H. Martin describing a reign of terror and corruption extending throughout the state under the auspices of the teamsters' union of the AFL. The controlling power over the terroristic unions was Dave Beck the personal appointee and representative of President Roosevelt's friend and political cohort, Daniel J. Tobin. Mr. Tobin has since served a term in the White House as the president's trusted adviser on labor and visited England as the president's special emissary to British labor, along with Joseph Padway, the attorney for some of the foulest racketeers in the whole evil record of unionism under the New Deal.

In his report to Governor Martin, Moody disclosed that among the files seized in the office of Al Rosser, the chief terrorist under Beck, he found a letter from Forbes Morgan, an uncle of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who was treasurer of the Democratic national committee, in the 1932 campaign, acknowledging $300 from Rosser's terrorists which had been turned over to Morgan by Tobin.

"The contribution comes at an opportune time," Morgan wrote Rosser, "and it means a great deal. I wish to thank you and the members of your union for the splendid support given President Roosevelt and the Democratic cause."

Rosser got 12 years in prison for arson in the teamsters' statewide reign of terror. Tobin and Beck, under whom he carried on his dirty work, were honored by the New Deal, and Mrs. Roosevelt's uncle, as a gesture of gratitude from the liquor interests for the repeal of prohibition, got a sinecure with the whisky industry which paid him $100,000 a year until he died. He would have been overpaid at $10,000 a year.

WOULD EXTEND UNITED NATIONS

Burton Sees Co-operation of Powers on Battlefields as Basis For Peace.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — The foundation for a lasting and united peace is being laid on the battlefields of the world through the united military action of the Allies, Sen. Harold H. Burton, (R., O.), said last night.

Burton spoke with Rep. Robert Ramspeck, (D., Ga.) before a session of town meeting in support of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution which would create an international organization after the war to prevent future aggression.

"The unity of military action developed through the war is a military asset of tremendous world-wide importance," Burton said. "Through continuance of it in some form the United Nations will have the best assurance each can get for the return of its men from war to production, retaining such a combined force as shall be necessary to maintain the stability of the world against military aggression.

Ramspeck asked if it were not "feasible to spend less money co-operating peacefully?" Wherever civilization prevails, he said, it was "achieved by organization and maintained by force. Why not apply those rules to world affairs."

Up and Down THE STREET

Truck drivers aren't usually thought of as being superstitious. But there are four drivers who would probably tell you that State Route 13 is a jinx. Yesterday two trucks, driven by Frank McHenry, Shelby, and Sylvester Goins, Dearborn, Mich., crashed on that road born, Mich., crashed on that road, the road and turned over in a ditch within a five-hour period. None of the four drivers was seriously injured. McHenry probably would attest that 13 is very unlucky since he was arrested for driving without a license.

When the managers of the Children's Theater looked for an idea for their program for tonight's production, they found a program from "Our American Cousin" which was playing in Washington, D. C., at the time of Abraham Lincoln's assassination. Thus the programs for "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" which the children will present tonight at 8:15 p. m. at the John Simpson auditorium is patterned after that one. It is worded and set up in the same manner as the one from "Our American Cousin."

WILLKIE HAILS GOP'S CHANCES

Says Party Has Challenging Opportunity To Win 1944 Elections.

(By Associated Press)

RUSHVILLE, Ind. — Wendell L. Willkie says the Republican party "should and can win" the 1944 elections with "a constructive liberal domestic program of expanding economy" and "a realistic foreign policy."

The 1940 G. O. P. presidential nominee declared "no party was ever presented with such an exciting challenge as is offered to the Republican party today nor with such an opportunity." His remarks were in a statement issued as he talked with Republican leaders of the eighth congressional district yesterday.

He said he disagreed with recent suggestions that if the war continued beyond next year the Roosevelt administration "will inevitably be returned to power," and added:

"As a matter of fact, for the successful conclusion of the war, the necessary rehabilitation of the country after the war is over, and the enlightened conduct of our foreign policy, the Republican party should and can win the next presidential and congressional elections."

Willkie said that besides adopting a liberal program the GOP must forsake "the tempting notion that it can win by amalgamation of the dissident groups in America" — the "narrow Nationalists," the "economically selfish," and those unwilling to sacrifice in time of war.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

This is the day, so they say, when life begins for the Old Podger.

In other words the old guy is failing, fat and forty. Fine shape to be starting life. Up to now, what they mean, I've just been fooling around, frittering my time away. But what fun frittering, my friends!

If I have as much fun in the next forty years as I've had in the first, I'll wind up a cackling old man, assuming that a cackle is what passes for a guffaw in an eightyish sort of way.

But what a day to start life. Friday the 13th!

In all seriousness I asked the boss: "Will it be all right if I stay in bed come Friday?" and I explained the situation to him.

"You stay in bed, and the house will probably burn down," says he, "best you come to work and take your chances."

These editors are hard-boiled birds, with hearts as big as goobers (peanuts to you).

Friday 13th is a jinx
For 40 years or 40 winx,
Rex is hexed, or so methinx,
And his poetry, it stinx—
(So I'm told by many ginx)
A black cat has me on the blinx.

What's to fear from forty? Why, nothing at all, to judge from the antics of some of my fat and forty friends.

Have you noticed who's been making the sport headlines in Mansfield lately. Guys who should be at home reading over their clippings of 20 to 25 years ago.

Instead these oldish gents are still collecting clippings.

There's Charlie Nail, who was captain of the Mansfield high school basketball team in the winter of 1918-19. Last Sunday he defeated Bob Enos 6-1, 6-2 in the semi-finals of the Woodlawn tennis tournament. Last winter he was still playing basketball at the Y. M. C. A.

There's Howard Hosler, captain of the high school cage team in 1915-16. He took medal honors in the qualifying round of the present Westbrook Country club golf tournament.

And there's Brownie Corcoran, who scored so many touchdowns for Mt. Vernon against Mansfield High one day in the autumn of 1920 that they're still trying to count 'em. The Cookie Cunningham to Corcoran forward pass combination was working that day Mt. Vernon 59, Mansfield 0. Last Sunday Corcoran drove in the winning run for Athletic Supplies in their championship baseball game with American Legion.

Forty? Phooie! I ain't scared.
Friday the 13th? Huh, Oh!

* * *

P. S.—That Friday 13th jinx is working.

My manager last night set the clock ONE HOUR SLOW.

So I got to work one hour late this morning. And had to turn out an hour's work in 20 minutes.

I don't know how he does it, but he does it.

Look at the old man go.

JOCKEY BARRED

CHICAGO—(INS)—Jockey George Bowman and Stable Boy Chester Jedlinski today were barred from all Illinois race tracks because of their involvement in the use of a battery on Lawrence F. King's horse, Tib, in Tuesday's third race at Washington park.

Boudreau Batters Apple

Blasts Eight Hits In Last Ten Times Up.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Manager Lou Boudreau's ministrations with a baseball bat—eight hits in his last ten trips to the plate—have put war paint back on the Cleveland Indians, now tied for second place as a result of yesterday's 4 to 3 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

The triumph, Cleveland's sixth in seven home games, moved the Tribe into a second place tie with the Detroit Tigers. The boy manager struck two triples and two singles to lead the attack, giving Pitcher Jim Bagby his 13th win against 10 defeats.

Joe Heving was called to the mound in the ninth, however, to put down a Philadelphia uprising.

* * *

Jo Jo White doubled in the ninth for the A's to drive in two runs and send Bagby to the showers, but Heving got the next two men out and Cleveland's winning streak was stretched to five games.

Mel Harder will pitch for the Indians today, seeking his sixth victory, and Don Black will fling for the A's.

BROOKLYN—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds have a slight suspicion that the Brooklyn Dodgers lost all those games for the express purpose of deluding the Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds have just lost two straight to the Dodgers, who were alleged to have collapsed to the point where they couldn't beat a team of grade school boys. Kirby Higbe, usually something of a soft touch for the Reds, did the job in yesterday's twilight with a 3-0, five-hit decision over Johnny Vander Meer.

Since the Pittsburgh Pirates also lost, the Reds continued in a tie for second place.

Vandy was just as good as Higbe except for the first inning, when the Dodgers got their three runs on a walk, an error by Eddie Miller on a double play ball, a single by Lou Olmo, another walk, and another single by Augie Galan.

Higbe fanned eight Reds to keep his lead, and the Reds never really threatened to give Vandy anything to work for.

Elmer Riddle for the Reds and Curt Davis or Ed Head for the Dodgers are today's pitchers.

Segura Nears Tennis Finals

Shirley Fry Meets Margaret Osborne.

RYE, N. Y. —(U.P.)— Top-seeded Francisco Segura of Ecuador, plays Seymour Greenberg of Chicago today for a berth in the finals of the eastern grass courts tennis championships at the Westchester Country club.

Women's quarter-final matches pit first-seeded Pauline Betz of Los Angeles against Katharine Winthrop of South Hamilton, Mass., and Margaret Osborne, No. 1, San Francisco, against Shirley Jane Fry of Akron, O.

Segura led the men into the semi-finals yesterday by ousting James Brink of Seattle Wash., 6-0, 7-5, while Greenberg disposed of Jack Tuero of New Orleans, 6-1, 6-1.

Miss Betz set the pace for the women's seeded stars, all of whom won. She beat Barbara Scofield of San Francisco, 6-1, 6-1, while Miss Fry eliminated Mrs Eleanor Cushingham, Beverly Hills, 6-3 6-2.

(By Associated Press)

Jack Kramer of Toledo today was added to the list of American Association pitchers who have turned in top performances for the season. He hurled a three-hit 2-0 shutout over Minneapolis which gave the Mud Hens a clean sweep of a five-game series.

Milwaukee maintained its 3½ game lead over Columbus by Walloping Indianapolis, 11-5, after the Tribe had defeated the Brewers four times.

Columbus stayed on the pace by beating St. Paul, 2-1, in 11 innings.

Says Baseball Will Survive

Veteran Declares Game Means Much To Soldiers.

By DEAK MORSE

BOSTON —(AP)— Baseball will survive World war II, if for NO other reason, than "because it means so much to the young fellows over across," says Hugh Duffy, veteran coach of the Boston Red Sox.

"I know that the boys over there are showing a tremendous interest in the game this year," declared Duffy, who admits he is "going on 75" and is second only to Connie Mack among men who are still active in the major leagues.

Hale and hearty, Duffy is at his beloved Fenway park every day during the playing season for his duties are to look over young players in whom the Red Sox are interested, and pass judgment as to just where they will best fit into the Boston system.

Duffy, who started his major league career under Pop Anson with the Chicago Nationals in 1888, thinks that his work with the youngsters has helped him to remain in good shape. Each morning and afternoon he hits out fungoes to aspiring infielders and outfielders but, he says, he doesn't go much beyond that and even doesn't throw much.

"My arm went long ago," he explained

With over 50 years of almost unbroken service in major league baseball, Duffy, whose ruddy complexion testifies to the great number of hours he has lived out-of-doors, would like to see the rules changed to allow coaches again to touch base runners.

He recalls that in his time a third base coach would often grab a runner headed hell bent for leather homewards and practically throw him back on third base if in his judgment the runner would be unable to score.

"You have trouble holding them up," Duffy said, "when they are charging along with their heads down They ought to let the coaches grab them again

The attitude of the players towards each other has changed a great deal, according to the veteran. When he played with the Chicago Nationals and later with the Boston Nationals, he said the base runners practically had to fight their way around the paths. One of the favorite tricks, he recalled, was for the third baseman to grab a base runner's belt as he poised on the bag waiting to dash for home after an outfielder snagged a fly ball.

"At that time there was only one umpire," the Boston coach said, "with two or three around you can't pull that stunt anymore."

It was in 1921 that the River Point, R. I. native started his career as manager of the Sox and he has been with them ever since in various capacities.

Because of the war, Duffy is getting only about a third of the youngsters to look over that he had previously and when he sees a boy stepping up to the plate trying to copy the batting stance or swing of some particular player he chuckles and says:

"My goodness, you'd think they'd copy Cronin, wouldn't you?"

Duffy calls the Sox manager the best pinch hitter in the game today and rates Ted Williams tops among the hitters—active or inactive Williams falling in the latter category as he is a naval flying student.

As for pitchers, Tex Hughson, another member of the Sox fold, is Hugh's "Boy." Duffy terms him "the best in either league—a wonder" and thinks the Texan may be a 20-game winner again this season.

* * *

Duffy shies away from picking any such thing as an all-star team or naming outstanding individuals of other years. There are too many toes the genial coach might tred upon. If he brings up the name of an individual of the bygone days he is always mentioned as, "Among those who were very good."

SCHEDULE CHANGED IN GIRLS' TOURNEY

Mansfield Provident Loan girls do not play tonight in the district tournament at Oberlin after all.

A telephone call from the district commissioner at Elyria last night informed them that the schedule had been changed, and they are to play Monday and Tuesday nights.

National Race For 2nd Place

But Phillies Succeed In Drawing Spotlight.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Phillies are throwing a smoke screen around the conflict now going on in the National league.

The only thing of importance still to be decided in the senior circuit, of course, is second place and this is the dispute which the Phillies, who are not concerned, are clouding up with their smoke.

Last night for the first time in more than a decade, for the first time since the Phillies under Burt Shotten finished in the first division in 1932, the Philadelphia National league ball club fashioned a seven-game winning streak.

They beat the Pittsburgh Pirates for the third straight time 4-3 after the bold Buccaneers had taken a 3-0 lead.

The victory allowed the Cincinnati Reds to continue in a tie for second place with the Pirates and so incensed the gladiators from Pittsburgh that Manager Frank Frisch, Pitchers Bob Klinger and Hank Gornicki and Infielder Al Rubeling all were banished from the game for protesting Umpire Tom Dunn's judgment of a ball in the fourth inning.

Cincinnati, which came to Brooklyn two days ago in third place, lost its second successive game to the Dodgers 3-0.

The St. Louis Cardinals conquered the New York Giants 4-1 with Mort Cooper pitching three-hit ball for his 16th triumph. One of the blows against him was Mel Ott's 15th home run.

The Boston Braves again beat the Chicago Cubs 3-2 in 12 innings on a triple by Elmer (Butch) Nieman and fine pitching by Al Javery.

In the American league the New York Yankees turned the tables on the St. Louis Browns and won a night game 6-2 behind Rookie Charley Wensloff's six-hit hurling.

Rudy York hit two home runs to bring his total to 21 as the Detroit Tigers thumped the Washington Senators 10-3 behind five-hit hurling by Hal White and Emmett O'Neill.

Lou Boudreau had a perfect turn at bat as Cleveland nosed out the Philadelphia Athletics 4-3 and the Chicago White Sox divided a double-header with the Boston Red Sox. Boston took the first game 10-6 but a triple by Luke Appling in the 14th led to a 7-6 triumph for Chicago in the nightcap.

ROWE GIVEN BONUS BY PHILLIE CLUB

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Lynnewood "Schoolboy" Rowe, who won his tenth game for the Phillies from Pittsburgh Wednesday, today received a $1,000 check from Quakers' President Bill Cox. The bonus was paid under terms of Rowe's contract, which called for $1,000 after he won ten games.

The pact reportedly promises an additional $100 for every game he wins over ten.

Woman Star Hits Long Ball

Dorothy Germain Gets Slammin' Sam Nickname.

By TOMMY DEVINE

EVANSTON, Ill. —(U.P.)— The nickname of "Slamming Sammy" was tacked on Dorothy Germain of Philadelphia today as the 43rd annual Women's Western Amateur Golf tournament moved into the semi-final round.

The nom-de-course for the 19-year-old golfer was borrowed from Sammy Snead and is a tribute to her booming tee shots. Miss Germain ranks as one of feminine golf's longest hitters.

Veteran experts believe that she's the greatest driver active in competitive play today and possibly could give Babe Didrickson Zaharias, the former Olympic heroine, a bitter dispute for the queen for all linksdom for driving distance.

Miss Germain yesterday defeated Ann Casey of Mason City, Ia., 5 and 4 to move into the round of four. Her opponent today will be Catherine Fox of Glen Ridge, N. J., who edged Marjorie Row of Detroit, one up.

In the other other semi-final match Peggy Kirk of Findlay, O., opposes Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich. Miss Kirk advanced by beating Betty Jean Rucker of Spokane, Wash., 2 up and Miss Wall bested Jeanne Cline of Bloomington, Ill., 1 up.

Miss Germain has been playing golf for eight years, but now is on the brink of her first major title. She also went to the semi-finals of the recent western open losing to Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga.

* * *

Miss Fox had a bitter struggle throughout with Miss Row, Michigan State co-ed. The match was even at the end of 16 holes, but the Jersey girl won the 17th with a par three. The final hole was halved.

Miss Wall was not up to the form that she displayed Wednesday in eliminating Kay Byrne of Rye, N. Y. She posted a mediocre medal card of 85.

Miss Kirk built up a three-hold advantage on the first nine and then withstood a belated rally by Miss Rucker to gain her victory.

Haegg Anxious To Return Home

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Gunder Haegg, the Swedish running ace, said today that he was anxious to leave for home in order to compete against Arne Andersson before the Swedish track season ended.

* * *

"I'm anxious to give Andersson a chance to beat me," Haegg said while commenting on the 4:02.6 mile his country man had registered for a new world record while Gunder was touring the United States.

* * *

"I am well satisfied with my accomplishments in this country," Haegg added. "I realize that many expected me to do better, but I feel that under the circumstances I did the best I could."

Haegg will attend a banquet at Worcester, Mass., tomorrow night, then go sightseeing in Washington and return to New York for a major league baseball game. He hopes to leave for home Aug. 22.

Town Isn't on Map But Goes To Tourney

Sharpsburg, O., Forgotten By Rand-McNally, Has Good Team.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Jinx day jottings—it's "Friday the 13th," you know!

You can't find the place on the Ohio highway department maps. Even Rand-McNally's list of populated spots ignore it, although mentioning such spots as Bobo of Pike county (population 4), and Damarin of Scioto county (population 3).

We speak of Sharpsburg, a little spot barely more than a crossroads, about four miles east of Fort Recovery, over along the Indiana border. But, regardless of what Rand-McNally and the Ohio highway department say, Sharpsburg definitely is on the map.

The "Speeds" from that metropolis (the Speeds are a baseball team) go to Wichita, Kan., tomorrow to participate in the national semi-pro tournament, representing western Ohio and eastern Indiana. They won the district tournament last week at Winchester, Ind., scoring 41 runs to 9 for four losing foes.

Star of the "Speeds" is Roman Brunswick, 19-year-old righthanded pitcher, who has a one-hitter and four shutouts to his credit in hurling the speeds to 11 wins in 13 starts. (League scouts please notice.)

Xavier university will play football this fall, but isn't sure just who will furnish the opposition. A week ago the Musketeers had five games on tap, meeting Dayton and Ohio university in home-and-home series, and Miami in a single contest. Both Dayton and Ohio U. tossed in the sponge this week, however, so Xavier's lone foe is Miami. Coach Clem Crowe is now seeking talent, assistant coaches, and opponents.

The war hasn't halted the St. Louis Cardinals' hunt for new faces, the world champions having scheduled a three-day free-for-all try-out session at Red Bird stadium, Columbus, Aug. 20, 21 and 22. Scouts Walter Shannon, Fred Hunter and Tony Kauffman, under the leadership of Joe Mathes, director of the class B, C and D Cardinal clubs, will be in charge.

Boys 16 years or older are invited, and each candidate must furnish his own transportation, uniform, equipment, housing and meals. Mathes said more than a score of boys who made their start in Red Bird camps are now in organized baseball. The speed, throwing, field and batting aptitude tests start at 9 a. m., Aug. 20.

Darke and Delaware counties are staging a close scrap for designation as "Ohio's No. 1 fair" this year. Over at Greenville, for the Darke county speed program slated Aug. 23-27, Chairman Tom Billingsley has lined up $42,500 in purses for the harness horsemen to shoot at, while the Delaware fair, Sept. 21-24, offers $35,500 in purses and features a Grand Circuit set-up. That averages almost $10,000 per day in purses for the eight days of racing, and you can't find anything like it outside the bookie realm.

Angels Sign Schoolboy

15-Year-Old Gets Bonus of $10,000.

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Here's a new saga of Billy the Kid.

He is, for the purpose of exact identification, Billy Sarni. Only 15 years old. Not yet out of high school.

Yet, he's the first string catcher of the Los Angeles baseball club, a team that is running away from the pack in the Pacific coast league.

A series of accidents projected the beardless Billy into the spotlight. First, Eddie Fernandes was injured, and a few days later Billy Holm went out with a split finger. The Angels didn't have a catcher.

In desperation President Clarence (Pants) Rowland went to Sarni's parents. They had intervened against flattering offers from various major league clubs—the Pittsburgh Pirates, Boston Red Sox, Cleveland Indians and Chicago Cubs.

But the veteran Pants Rowland was persuasive, and, aided by a $10,000 bonus, won over the parents.

Sarni joined the Angels the next day and in his first turn at bat smashed out a home run.

Billy has played 12 games and is batting a neat .321. He has thrown out 11 runners trying to steal bases. He's still calling signals, and the vetern Los Angeles pitching staff isn't shaking its collective head at them, either.

$8 A BUSHEL CHARGED FOR PEACHES HERE

Drop In Price Expected Later When Local Crop Comes In; Cleveland Pays $11.

Mansfield housewives who want to can peaches were paying a record price of $8 a bushel for them today, but there's a chance the price might drop a little by September.

In Cleveland, where the OPA said it would make no attempt to enforce a ceiling on them, peaches soared to $11 a bushel in some markets. That's more than three times the price at this time last year.

The $8 peaches in Mansfield have been shipped from Georgia and California orchards, merchants said, and the price is expected to drop to $6, or possibly $5 a bushel, later when more of the home-grown peaches are ready for market.

Early home-grown varieties were selling for about $5 today in Mansfield stores, but the crop is so small in this section of Ohio that there won't be many of them on the market.

One of the county's leading peach growers said his main crop won't be ready before Sept. 1 and then he expects to sell his fruit for about $5 a bushel.

The $11 price charged in Cleveland would make large peaches sell for about 15 cents each, a prohibitive figure for the average consumer.

Blaming the short home crop and high transportation costs for the excessive price, OPA representatives said "any attempt to set ceiling prices would only result in a black market."

Many northern Ohio peach growers said they would sell their crop at the orchard rather than ship them to market and would charge all they can get for the fruit.

ENROLL NURSES

CD Office Seeks To Replenish Dwindling Supply.

Enlistment of women between the ages of 18 ad 35 for the cadet nurses' corps was under way today in Mansfield to help supplement the dwindling supply of nurses on the home front.

Women who quality for the training will receive their instruction in approved hospitals. Their room and board will be provided and they will receive expense allowances during their training period.

The pre-cadet will get $15 a month during the first nine months of her training. During the next 15 to 21 months the junior cadet will be paid $20 a month, and the senior cadet then will be allocated $30 a month until her graduation.

Information concerning enlistments is available at the civilian defense office in the city building, or by calling 1658-6.

The paper, official organ of the Social Democrat party, said Finland is "awaiting great events."

DOING BETTER

Blood Donors Set Improved Pace, Says Red Cross.

Better response to the blood donor cards which are sent out each month before the Red Cross Blood Donor Unit is in Mansfield, has been given this month, officials said, but more donors are needed to fill the schedule for the three days, Aug. 19, 20, and 21, that the unit will be here.

Approximately 488 cards out of 702 that were mailed out have been returned. Persons receiving the cards are asked to return them to the Red Cross office stating whether they are able to donate blood this month.

The schedule for Thursday, Aug 20, has been filled, but more donors are needed for Friday and Saturday. Only a few have signed for Friday while the Saturday schedule is almost complete.

480,000 'A' GAS COUPONS GONE

Four Arrested In Huge Gasoline Black Market Probe.

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—With four persons already arrested, federal investigation of a huge gasoline black market was widened today as OPA officials disclosed that 480,000 unissued "A" gas coupons have disappeared in transit between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Latest to be arrested was Barbara Ross, 23, of Oakland, charged with illegal possession of more than 2,000 "A" stamps, each good for four gallons of gasoline. It was believed the stamps were part of the missing shipment.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Valentine C. Hammack said he believed the unissued coupons have been circulating through black market channels at a price of $3 for a sheet of eight stamps.

ASSERTS MANY RADIO STATION MEN FEAR FCC

Former Ohioan Testifies That Broadcasters Are Afraid To Press Legal Rights.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Many owners of radio stations operate in fear of the Federal Communications Commission, Robert K. Richards, an executive in the Office of Censorship, testified today before a congressional sub-committee which is delving into the activities of the FCC.

"Isn't it true," asked Eugene L. Garey, counsel for the committee, "that the radio industry lives in fear and terror of the FCC?"

"My observation is that those broadcasters (licensees) with whom I have come in contact are in fear of the FCC," Richards admitted.

Richards, who is executive assistant for broadcasting, Office of Censorship, made it clear he couldn't speak for all radio station owners because he was "not acquainted with radio as a whole." He knew of the feeling of many of those with whom he came in contact, however.

The testimony developed that Richards, prior to going into government service, spent five years in newspaper work and four years in radio—mostly in Ohio.

Richards told the committee the broadcasters he referred to were mainly in fear of one division of the FCC—the war problems division.

It previously had been testified that the war problems division of FCC had investigated various stations holding temporary licenses, notably those carrying domestic foreign-language broadcasts.

When Attorney Garey bluntly asked Richards if the licensees of radio stations lived in fear and terror of the FCC, Richards cautiously replied:

"Some of the foreign language stations exhibit symptoms akin to fear."

Further questions brought the admission from Richards that many of the radio stations he had relations with did fear the FCC.

"Is it true," pursued Garey, "that broadcasters hesitate to challenge the FCC when they know FCC is exceeding its authority?"

Many of those with whom I have been in contact do hesitate," Richards conceded.

"The broadcasters are reluctant to insist on their legal rights?" prompted Garey.

"Yes, sir," replied Richards.

Richards was asked by Garey if there were many regulations by the radio broadcasters of Office of Censorship regulations. "Very few in number and minor in character," was Richards reply.

Counsel Garey has been trying to prove that broadcasters were forced from the air by pressure from the FCC and the Office of War Information, and that replacement broadcasters were suggested by FCC and OWI.

James A. Guest, attorney for the FCC in New York, testified last week that the FCC had no legal power to put any person off the air but does have the authority to revoke station licenses.

Richards said he did not wish to reveal publicly the exact number of violations by radio stations of censorship regulations but offered to tell the committee in private.

Garey asked the witness if it appeared that FCC was "trying to ride herd" on the Office of Censorship and Richards replied "Yes, specifically the war problems division."

PARENTS HELD

Face Delinquency Charge on Story Daughter Told.

The parents of a 17-year-old Mansfield girl were held for trial today on charges of contributing to her delinquency. Police Chief Meade K. Bates filed the charges following a police investigation into why the girl left home last Sunday.

Under bond in the county jail were Lawrence Lyons, 32, and his wife, Marie, 33, of 352 Springmill street. Both pleaded innocent in juvenile court this morning. Lyons, the girl's step-father, is held under $500 bond and the mother's bond was set at $300 by Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer.

The 17-year-old daughter of Mrs. Lyons accused her step-father of immoral conduct with her when officers questioned the girl about her disappearance Sunday with her 15-year-old aunt.

The girls went to police headquarters Monday after learning that they had been reported missing. They said the older girl left home because conditions there had become unbearable.

The Next of Kin.

"The Next of Kin," wch opens Saturday at the Madison, tells the story of a combined operations raid by Allied Nations forces, which suffers frightful loss when thoughtless chatter betrays its intended surprise attack on the Nazis. The picture, it is said, shows moviegoers how a German spy works. The spy in the picture is Mervyn Johns. The picture is a British production made in co-operation with the English army authorities. Madison co-attraction, starting tomorrow, will be "Mr. Big."

Walked With Zombie.

"I Walked With a Zombie," which is the current top attraction at the Park, has as its locale a small island in the Caribbean. The story involves a wealthy sugar-planter, his wife, half-brother, mother and a nurse. The wife is the victim of an odd tropic fever. Anxious to cure her, the nurse takes her to a native voodoo ceremony in the hills. Her well-meant action leads to the disclosure that the wife is really a "zombie." Ray "Crash" Corrigan, Dennis Moore and Max "Alibi" Terhune star in "Cowboy Commandos," the other film.

Cabin In the Sky.

Rochester, the man Jack Benny discovered (or vice versa) finds himself very much in the middle in "Cabin In the Sky," which opens tomorrow at the Ritz. Based on the Broadway musical, the film deals with the struggle between the forces of good and evil for the soul of Little Joe, played by Rochester. Ethel Waters, as Little Joe's devoted wife, trys to lead her gambling husband along the righteous path. Lena Horne, a tempting temptress, does all in her power to lead Little Joe astray. Duke Ellington and his band furnish the music. Co-feature is "Silver Spurs."

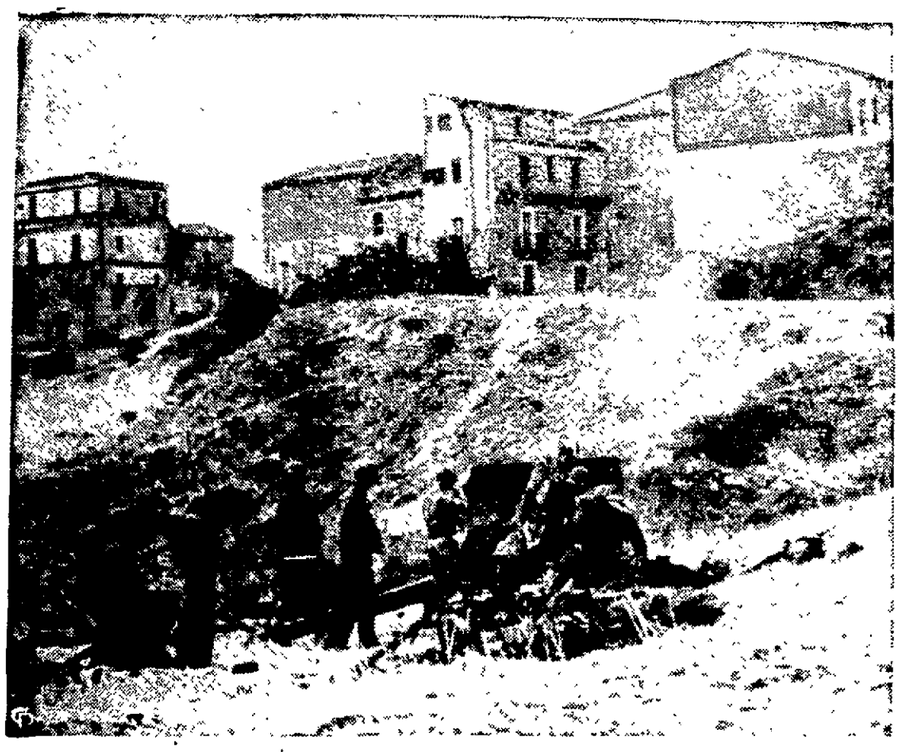
Hard-Hitting U. S. Artillery In Action



American artillery that has established such a reputation in Sicilian battles is pictured above in action outside Castle di Tusa as it covered an attack by infantrymen of the U. S. Seventh army against the Axis defenders of the town. Much of the credit for the rapid American advances on the island has been given the artillery for its bombardments of Axis positions.

BLACKOUT NEW TO CALEDONIANS

A SOUTH PACIFIC BASE—(U.P.)—The little French colonial town of Noumea, New Caledonia, had its second total blackout of the war recently.

Lights in the town and at outlying U. S. army and navy camps as well as Fighting French installations were turned out shortly after dark for one-half hour.

The experience attracted considerable attention amongst the French and native Caledonian residents. Although they have been on the fringes of the war in the South Pacific, they have seen little of actual battle conditions.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS SIGNS OF RECOVERY MOVE

Select Stocks Edge Higher But Majority Limited To Minor Gains.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Selective recoveries appeared in today's early stock market proceedings although the majority were limited to minor fractions.

At a moderately active opening gainers included General Electric, Pennsylvania, Loew's, Montgomery Ward and American Telephone. American Can slipped, along with United Aircraft.

Those watching merchandising securities for trend clues noted the Dun & Bradstreet survey which found this week's retail spending throughout the nation, while a bit under last week's volume, topped the comparable 1942 period by 6 to 9 per cent.

CHICAGO — (AP) — There was nothing in the over night news to influence grain prices today and wheat, oats and rye opened with little change from yesterday's close.

Wheat started unchanged to ¼ lower, September 1.43, December 1.44⅞, and rye ⅜ lower to ⅜ higher, September 96½-¾.

Charges Highway Employes Get Out Paper for Bender

dence, after a study of records and reports submitted by Highway Director Hal G. Sours and Division Engineer Robert E. Willems of Cleveland, to support charges of "payroll padding" and reiterated a former declaration that "anyone found drawing state pay and not working at his job will be dismissed forthwith."

Sours conducted an inquiry yesterday—at the governor's request—after three division employes were reported to have worked in Cuyahoga county Republican headquarters last Monday. Timekeeping records show those employes did any outside work on their own time. Bricker said.

Later, however, Don Power, secretary to Bricker, said the investigation was not necessarily completed. He added Sours would continue his inquiry to make certain that any possible irregularities were cleaned up.

The Press charged that the three men had been ordered to Bender's office to assist in getting out the paper by a highway official when they should have been working in the highway department.

The practice, the paper said, had been followed for several months despite the assertion by a member of Bender's office staff that the men had worked only on their day off in the employ of the state since July 15.

25% GAS SLASH DUE IN MIDWEST

Three-Gallon Allotment Due By Sunday; East To Get Similar Amount.

B. Searcy, chairman of a legislative committee investigating gasoline rationing in Illinois, said he had telegraphed the 28 members of the Illinois congressional delegation urging them to oppose the contemplated reduction. He asked that Ickes and Prentiss Brown, price administrator, delay the reduction until congress "can determine the actual necessity" for the cut.

OPA officials in Chicago said they understood Ickes would give the general outline of the equalization plan in a radio address Sunday, only a few hours before the anticipated cut would go into effect.

Reports from Chicago indicated the new ration restrictions would reach as far south as Texas, New Mexico, and Alabama, north to the Canadian border, and west to the Rocky Mountains. Only the Far West would escape the order.

Congressman Clarence J. Brown of Blanchester, O., heads a congressional committee on rationing which has opposed slashing gas rations in the middle west, asserting that the new oil line recently completed to the east should give the eastern states adequate gas without taking any away from Ohio and other middle western states. The committee conferred recently with Ickes in Chicago.

NOT INVITED, STALIN SAYS

concern in high places that the Russian premier may have decided to lead his nation on its individual path, both during the war and in the establishment of the peace to follow.

Last week, the official Russian newspaper "Pravda" had reiterated Stalin's demand for a full-fledged second front in Europe which would be satisfactory only when one-fourth to one-third of Germany's military strength had been diverted from the Russo-German fighting front.

Meanwhile, the beginning of formal discussions between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill were not expected to take place in Quebec for the next several days. Military staffs of Great Britain and the United States are now holding preliminary discussions at the Chateau Frontenac, and time must be given them to formulate military and naval strategy for submission to the two nations' high commands.

Following the precedent set at previous meetings, it is understood that the British and United States military and naval high commands are meeting jointly to work out the strategy of attack to be employed in this global war.

It is only later that the highest ranking officials of the two United nations join in the discussions—to revise or approve the military moves that undoubtedly will make headlines and history in the months to come.

Uppermost in the thoughts of observers here is the question of what the Allied strategists are planning for carrying the war to German soil.

It is felt here, that while previous meetings have laid the groundwork for an invasion of Europe, the present conference will determine the actual avenues of approach, the numbers of troops to be thrown into the assault, and the amounts of material to be concentrated for the battle to come. In other words, the view here is that this is the conference that will spell the end for Germay in the war—an eventuality that some optimists predict may be realized before the year's end.

If these differences between Russia on the one hand and Britain and the United States on the other do exist, it is certain that they will come under miscroscopic examination in the course of the pending talks, should these differences be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned, it is probable that the agreement will remain as another secret of the war—at least until peace has once more been established.

HOUR OF GRACE +++

CHAPTER XXV

A shower late the night before cooled the morning of Erica and Toby's wedding day.

In her room dressing for the occasion Meegan moved quickly, thinking of breakfast earlier with Toby and her mother and their going over the final details. The ceremony was scheduled for eleven o'clock and there would be only the two small families in the church with Helen and Roy acting, respectively, as matron of honor and best man. From the church they would go, inconspicuously, they hoped, to Roy and Helen's house from which Toby and Erica would leave by motor for their honeymoon.

There was a good chance that a quiet wedding would pass unnoticed today. For on this Labor day week-end, perhaps the gayest week-end of the season, the islanders would be in a persistent pursuit of pleasure and sports. The houses would be filled with guests and there would be continuous parties at the club house and in the various yachts anchored in the picturesque inlet. Two invitations to cocktail parties Meegan had been forced to ignore, knowing that the announcement of Toby's marriage would later serve as an explanation for her absence. The mothers of the children she had called, too, saying briefly that she would not be able to take the children to the beach that morning Later they, too, would know why.

A few minutes ago she had heard her mother go downstairs and now she heard Toby moving about his room. She wondered what he was thinking as she pulled the new dark frock over her head . . . Of what did you think on one's wedding day? When you were a little girl, you always wondered how you would look on your wedding day, not what you thought and felt. Odd that the devious paths of Toby's life had been so charted as to bring him an August marriage to a girl unlike any he had known before, a girl who had thought a short while ago that she belonged nowhere, a girl as unlike Clare as day is unlike night. So it was not a girl with whom he had grown up or a girl he had met on a cruise or on a week-end in New York . . . It was Erica with her dark eyes and flowing dark hair and tense little face.

She thought, I'm hurrying because I want Erica and Toby to be safe. And when they've gone off in the car, I'll know they are safe. I'm afraid of Clare's silence . . . I don't like it. I'm afraid of her. She's so silent and she's never been silent before. But when Erica and Toby are married and gone, I won't be afraid any more. And Mother and I will close the house in two weeks and go back to town and I won't see Clare again. We won't meet this winter. I'll never see Clare again and I'll never see Fayne again and this is our last summer on the island.

She was fixing her hair when the telephone on her night table rang. Later she would have cause to think that the reason the telephone on the second floor was in her room was because as a child with a broken leg she had been able both to lie in bed and talk to her friends while her leg mended and it had been her father's idea for the telephone to be installed there. The telephone in the first floor hall, of course, was the one most used by the family. And later she was also to think that it was because her mother had stepped outside into the garden for a moment that she had not taken the call downstairs.

Crossing the room to her night table she thought, it isn't Clare. It's too late for Clare, too late for her to do or say anything now. In an hour Erica and Toby will be married . . . It's probably Adele wanting to know why I haven't called her.

But it was Clare who asked with a voice as sharp as jagged ice, "Is Toby there?"

"Yes, Clare, he is. But he's—he's getting dressed. May I have him call you?" In a little more than an hour Erica and Toby would be on their way . . . In a little more than an hour . . .

"I want to speak to him now. You know perfectly well he won't call me back when he's being married at eleven o'clock this morning. I want to speak to him now."

Her mother, Meegan thought . . . Her mother who had never been able to keep pleasant news had told someone and someone had told Clare . . .

"I'll call him."

But when she looked up, Toby was standing in the room. He was dressed for his wedding in a new blue suit.

Frowning, he asked, "Clare?"

She nodded. "Shall I leave, Toby?"

"Thanks."

* * *

She stepped out and walked down the hall, making no attempt to eavesdrop, her optimism dropping from her with each step, anger replacing it. And because her anger would not permit her to stand motionless looking down at the placid water she walked down the hall again and met Toby as he came out of her room. His face told her nothing.

"I'm out of cigarets," he said. "I'm going down to the club to get some. Won't be a minute. You look very elegant."

She nodded. He was going to see Clare . . . An hour before his wedding he was going to see Clare . . .

He walked past her. Then he turned and said, "I wish you'd stop in and see Clare some time in the next few days . . ."

"Why?"

"Oh, you might find out a few things for yourself, that's all. I wish you would. I'd appreciate it."

He turned and left her and she went into her room and finished her dressing and waited for him to come back. She would not have been at all surprised if he never came back, she thought. The next moment she wondered if he came back and married Erica, if she, Meegan could force herself to call on Clare . . .

She went downstairs seeing that her mother, pretty and young looking in a beige costume, her face becomingly tinted, had casually picked up her knitting.

"Toby didn't have any cigarets," Elinor McLean said. "I suppose he was nervous. But I do hope he won't be delayed Dreadful if he kept her waiting at the church. . . . Your dress is lovely, darling. And practical. You'll be able to wear it all winter. I could have mine dyed. I heard of a man who is splendid at that . . . Oh, dear, I'm nervous, too. I hope I won't cry. Toby would despise me if I did. I knew this day would come. Your father and I used to talk about it when he thought I was too possessive. And Erica is a sweet girl with so much common sense. Her family is odd but I suppose I think that because I've always known the same people. I suppose I'm horribly out-of-date but I won't make any apologies to anyone because Erica didn't have a proper debut . . . The times are changing so . . . Oh, I do wish he would come . . ."

Meegan walked to the window and parted the curtains. She felt as one does following a bad fright or a costly mistake or a long illness . . . weak and trembling . . . The road was clear. No sign of a car.

Her mother said, "I think that as soon as we get back to town we should put the house in the hands of an agent again. Of course we'll always visit down here. I can always stay with my friends and you with yours or at the club. I was talking to Fred the other evening and he said he thought this was quite a good time to put the house on the market. If and when we get actively into the war, he said, people will be so involved in that and higher taxes they won't want to take on the responsibility of a country house. I've reconciled myself to parting with it. Temporarily, of course. I'm sure that in a few years either you or Toby will buy it back for me and we'll all be together again for the summers."

Meegan smiled. Her mother's faith . . .

Her mother asked, "Isn't that a car coming now?"

"No. It must be on the main road."

"Probably he saw someone and stopped to talk."

Meegan thought, you saw someone and stopped to talk and said that Toby was being married today. Oh, why did you?

Her mother said, "It's amazing how much one accomplishes in knitting just by picking it up a few minutes at a time. I shall be able to do a great deal of it this winter. I really must join one of the organizations and do some work. And if we sell the house we'll put the money in defense bonds. I remember in the last war we bought so many bonds. Your father wouldn't want me to do less in this one. Oh, dear, I've made a mistake . . . I'll have to rip this out . . . Talking too much and nervous. Aren't you nervous, dear?"

"Yes, a little." A little!

"I do wish he'd come. You should have gone for his cigarets, Toby has so little sense about time . . . I wonder how Erica will look. I suppose she was being sensible again when she decided to wear a street costume. I hope you'll be married in the conventional white, dear. My wedding dress . . . It's like new . . . I won't rip this out now. I'm too nervous. We'll have two weeks of rest before we go back to town and I think you should give up your little job with the children and just rest and play. You've been so faithful about the recreation of those children . . ."

SULPHAPYRIDINE SAVES LIVES OF 10,000 MENINGITIS VICTIMS

(By International News Service)

LONDON—The lives of 10,000 men and women suffering from cerebrospinal meningitis—meningitis victims—were saved during 1940-41 by use of the new drug, sulphapyridine.

Ernest Brown, minister of health, disclosing this estimate of the Medical Research Council today said:

"Probably 7,500 more lives were saved by the use of sulphapyridine in pneumonia cases."

Taking only two diseases, this drug has saved more lives than the Nazi war machine was able to destroy in the battle of Egypt.

In the years 1934-1937 the fatality rate for meningitis was 66 per cent. In 1939, by skilled use of the new drug it was brought down to 33 per cent and at present four out of every five patients recover.

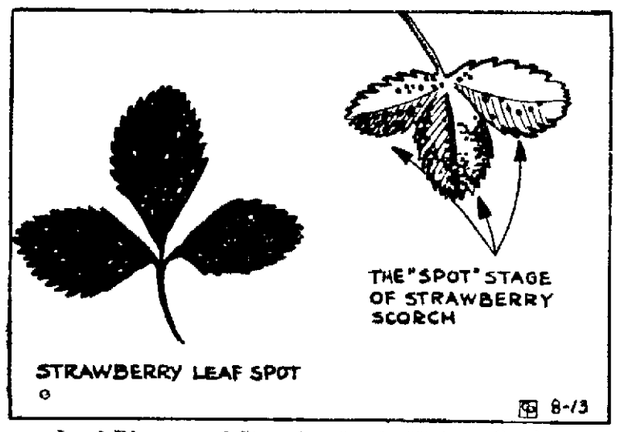
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Leaf Diseases of Strawberries In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

If you were troubled this season because the strawberry plants in your Victory garden had a spotted or a scorched appearance, investigation may show them to be afflicted with either one of two disease, both caused by fungi, strawberry leaf spot or strawberry scorch.

Both of these diseases are referred to as "leaf diseases," although leaf spot and scorch often occur on fruitstalks but they are most common and conspicuous on the leaves.

Leaf spot, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, is one of the most widely distributed and best-known diseases of strawberries. When the spots caused by the disease first appear they are of a reddish or purplish tint, but as they increase in size the center of each becomes paler and finally gray or almost white.

The spots are scattered irregularly over the surface of the leaf and often become so numerous as to cause the death or a large portion of the leaf and in extreme cases even of the plant.

Scorch is almost as common on strawberries as leaf spot, for which it may be mistaken in the early stages, when the spots or blotches, usually purplish in color, are irregular in outline as illustrated, and vary in diameter from 1-20 to 1-5 of an inch In case of severe infection of scorch entire plants may be killed or so weakened as to be worthless

Control of leaf spot and scorch can be obtained by spraying with 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture as soon as growth is well started in the spring (when the first leaves are about half grown) and repeat as often as necessary to keep the foliage well covered until the first berries are about one-third grown. Fall applications will also aid control.

U. S. BOMBERS BLAST ROME IN SECOND ATTACK

Railroad Yards Blasted By Yanks; RAF Hits Berlin, Turin and Milan.

both Axis capitals felt the sting of Allied air power.

RAF Halifax and Liberators from the Middle East command early yesterday, contributed their share of the Allied aerial effort to force the Italians out of the war. They heavily attacked railway sidings at San Giovanni, on the toe of Italy just opposite the Axis Messina bridgehead on Sicily.

The first waves of Flying Fortresses ran over Rome this morning and hit the San Lorenzo yards a little after 11 a. m.

Almost simultaneously, Mitchells and Marauders began bombing the Littorio yards.

It was an all-American raid again, the bombers coming from the strategic air force which is commanded by Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle.

As before, the pilots were instructed before going out on the necessity of getting their bombs in the target area and to avoid hitting churches or historical objects.

An air force commentator, pointing out the strategic importance of Rome in the Axis communications system, said the capital fort must be considered as any other military objective.

The San Lorenzo yards, situated in the east central part of Rome, connect rail traffic with Florence and Naples, while the Littorio yards are the link with Genoa.

A heavy volume of German military traffic has been flowing through the two yards.

Italian Ferry Terminal Bombed

CAIRO—(INS)—The ferry terminal of San Giovanni, on the toe of the Italian boot opposite Messina, Sicily, was subjected to a new heavy bombing by British-manned Halifax and Liberator bombers while Wellington bombers pounded Preveza, port on the west coast of Greece, the Middle East command announced today.

Bomb bursts were observed on railway tracks and near the train-ferry terminal at San Giovanni, the communique said. Numerous damaging fires were started.

In the assault on Preveza the Wellingtons smashed a quay.

Only one bomber was reported missing from both operations.

Nazi Government Quits Berlin, Claim

BERN, Switzerland —(AP)— Reports reaching here said today a substantial part of the Nazi government machinery has been transferred from Berlin to Vienna for safety from Allied air raids.

These reports also claimed Nazi authorities were considering proclaiming their capital an open city in an effort to save it from the same fate which struck Hamburg, Cologne, Duesseldorf and other German cities.

German reports indicate more than 1,250,000 civilians of a total of 4,250,000 already have evacuated Berlin, Leipzig, Madgeburg and Brunswick also are reported being evacuated.

Railroad yards are said to be crammed with evacuation trains, waiting for instructions where to go. Evacuees often are being kept waiting in crowded coaches and trucks for days at a time without adequate feeding and sleeping arrangements, reports said, resulting in a further increase in ailments and lowering morale.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—If you've figured out now how to tell the new pennies from dimes, you're ready for the next course in wartime coinage—ration tokens.

Jury Starts Deliberations In Weekley-Reed Slander Case

are to be based on the amount of damage done to the plaintiff's reputation and the actual malice involved.

Returning to the courtroom an hour later, Foreman C. M. Crafton stated the jury would like to be instructed on a point of law. When advised by the judge that the question would have to be put in writing he returned to the jury room. A few minutes later the bailiff was informed the jury had decided it did not need the instruction.

At noon the jurors were dismissed for lunch and allowed to go their separate ways after being told to return at 1 p. m.

There was no indicationat lunch time that the jury was near a verdict, since it had to ascertain, first, guilt or innocence, and then agree on the amount of damages in the event its decision went against Dr. Reed.

In the closing arguments yesterday, defense attorneys depicted Dr. Reed as a "kindly soul with the interest of the Butler school system at heart" while attorneys for Weekley insisted that the school fight had no place in the case and emphasized the importance of the testimony of their dozen or more witnesses, to the effect that Dr. Reed had told them Weekley had syphilis.

Attorney John Catlett, who opened the argument for the plaintiff, summarized the testimony of the more than 40 witnesses who took the stand during four days of the trial.

When he had concluded this summary Catlett told the jury, "You have heard the testimony of 12 persons who said here on the stand that Dr. Reed had told them Weekley had syphilis, some even as early as January, 1940."

"We wouldn't excuse a barber, a merchant, a laborer, or a housewife for spreading such stories about a man. How much less then should we excuse a doctor, a man of science, who had the opportunity to investigate the truth of these statements and did not," Catlett said.

"The defense had brought in a number of witnesses to prove that Weekley's reputation was bad before these stories started and we have proven that most of them were opposed to Weekley, that some of them had even had trouble with him. But suppose that his reputation was bad as the defense would have you believe, does that mean that a man can say that he has syphilis?" the attorney asked.

Attorney A. S. Beach, opening the argument of the defense, asked the jury to consider that on the testimony of 21 witnesses produced by the defense Weekley's reputation was bad before October 1941 and therefore he could have sustained no damage to his reputation.

"Here is an old doctor who had practiced in this community for over 18 years. His life was a part of the life of Butler. His heart and soul were in harmony with the good of the schools. He noticed something was wrong and considered it part of his duty to look into things for the betterment of the schools of Butler," Beach stated.

He asked the jury to consider that Weekley did not file his complaint against the doctor until June, 1942, when the alleged cause for his action took place in October, 1941.

"Why," asked Beach, "did it take him eight months to think he had an action for $10,000? Had something happened? Did he hold a grudge because he had not been rehired?"

Taking up the argument where his colleague left off, Attorney L. H. Beam asserted that there had been too much malice in the whole Butler school affair, too much interest not in the school but in individuals and that the present case itself was full of malice not on the part of Dr. Reed but on the part of Weekley and his attorneys.

He pictured Dr. Reed as an "old gentleman, honest, forthright, grown gray in the service of his neighbors," and spoke of Weekley as a "trouble maker who admitted that trouble began the second day he was in Butler."

"Dr. Reed could not harm Weekley's reputation. Every character witness called to the stand besmirched the character of Weekley. You know that people whose character is good are never talked about and every witness said he had heard stories about Weekley's morals.

"Weekley was the school election of 1941 and the election was Weekley. There is no use to deny that. Those who opposed him were elected giving evidence of what the people of Butler thought of him," Beam told the jury.

Concluding the arguments and completing the case for the plaintiff, Attorney George Biddle asked the jury for justice. "There is nothing that will make up for a lost reputation," he asserted.

"Such a thing as the Butler school fight could not arise in a city like Mansfield where people are open-minded. You have to go to Butler where they are carrying on a 25-year feud to get into slander. It seems evident that Weekley was pushed around in this situation and as a result of opposing factions," Biddle stated.

Bigger and Better Bombings Due for Japs In Pacific

warned the Japanese people that the United States apparently was preparing to "raid our mainland, Japan, from the north."

Bad weather grounded airplanes as U. S. troops fought in the jungles to wipe out the last Japanese holdings at Bairoko harbor on New Georgia island, and a communique reported only that "our ground advance continues."

Blockading warcraft sank a Japanese auxiliary vessel last night in Blackett Strait leading into Kula gulf. The blockade is choking off help for Bairoko harbor's defenders from the sea.

east coast there were further gains, despite stiffening resistance from the suicide rear guards which the Germans have left behind to cover their withdrawal from the Messina bridgehead to Sicily.

The Eighth army reached the village of the Trearchirafi, on the east coast three miles south of Riposto, and is threatening Giarre, the communique said.

"Northwest of Mt. Etna, after bitter fighting north of Bronte, the Eighth army succeeded in making an advance towards Maletto in cooperation with the (U. S.) Seventh army troops, who are now four miles from Randazzo on the Cesaro road," it stated. "American mobile forces covering the left of this advance on Randazzo made considerable progress across the mountain today."

Allied planes, swarming over the narrow Messina strait which separates the island from the mainland, were taking a heavy toll of Axis evacuation barges and their occupants despite a terrific anti-aircraft barrage laid down by hundreds of guns, reports to headquarters said.

The narrowness of the strait made it likely the Germans would save a considerable portion of their remaining divisions and equipment from annihilation.

Noland Norgaard, Associated Press correspondent with the British Eighth army, reported last night that orders left behind by the withdrawing Germans decreed that Italian troops be ruthlessly brushed aside and driven from the roads to clear a path for the retreat on Messina.

The escaping Germans were ordered to bring all possible equipment with them, Norgaard wrote, and quoted captured Germans as saying "the passport to Italy is a gun."

Germans retreating from the Randazzo sector north of Mt. Etna have been forced by the incessant Allied air attacks to move convoys only at night. Knocked out vehicles have been abandoned at the rate of on every 50 feet, an escaped American prisoner said.

In a late dispatch, Norgaard said the German high command had established a special headquarters to organize the evacuation and prepare defenses on the mainland against any surprise Allied attack on the toe of the Italian boot.

Italians Admit Mt. Etna Withdrawal

ROME — (INS) — (By official Italian wireless) — German and Italian troops have been forced to withdraw still farther to the east of Mount Etna in Sicily by strong Allied attacks, the Italian high command admitted today.

The communique said that the Allied drive has been developed with extensive use of armored units and masses of planes attacking in collaboration with naval forces.

A raid by Allied bombers on Ventopene and near Naples was reported and the Italians claimed that nine craft were shot down.

Honors Pile Up for Marine Dive Bomber, Mansfield Guest

about the D. F. C. ribbon attached to the left breast of his dress whites.

He cautiously side-stepped any discussion about the exploits that won him the citation but it was learned from his father, who accompanied him here and who had a copy of the order that Kollman received the award for direct hits on a Japanese battleship, a cruiser, a transport and a destroyer last November.

Smilingly the captain admitted that he was a "busy man" during the three days that the battle of the Bismarck sea raged in the Solomon area.

This was the battle in which a Jap naval task force attempted to retake Guadalcanal, wrested from them by the marines, and were turned back by navy and marine forces, principally aerial units.

The citation awarded Kollman lists a direct hit on an enemy battleship on Nov. 13, direct hits on a cruiser and a transport loaded with enemy troops on Nov. 14, and a direct hit on an enemy destroyer on Dec. 11.

You don't need much imagination to realize what happened to all four of those vessels—and the Jap warriors.

The citation was presented to Capt. Kollman by Maj. Gen. Mark A. Vandegrift, commanding general of marine forces in the Solomon islands.

He was also presented with a Japanese officer's saber, a gift from Gen. Vandergrift, which he gave to his father on his return to the states as a belated Christmas present.

"The Japs are given credit for being more daring than they really are," Capt. Kollman said. "The fighting men will fight to death only because they have been taught that they will be tortured to death if they give up."

"Our men are better men and are better trained than the Japs. They are just as daring and plenty of them make the Japs look sick."

He boosts the Marine Air corps because he doesn't think there's anything quite like it. He says that they hold just about every record there is.

The unit which Capt. Kollman was with in the Solomons is still overseas, but he was sent back to the states because of malaria which he contracted in the Solomons. At the present he is on a 30-day leave after which time he will report back to the west coast. He expects to do instruction work there for about eight months.

REDS TIGHTEN KHARKOV GRIP

Strong Fighting Marks Drive To Retake Bryansk From Germans.

Nazis were in headlong retreat in that area. The nearest approach to Kharkov was to the northeast.

In the Bryansk sector, the communique said the Soviet attackers pushed to a point 25 miles southeast of Bryansk. Moscow claimed 1,800 Germans were annihilated in that sector.

Gains also were reported west and southwest of Kromi, between Orel and Karachev. Soviet guards stormed into Dmitrovsk-Orlovsky, which the Germans had transformed into a strongly fortified bastion, and smashed enemy resistance after fierce street fighting. More than 2,000 German officers and men were slain in this engagement.

On the Kharkov salient the Germans were reported using fresh forces rushed from Germany in an attempt to stem the Russian tide, and had even ordered technical units and engineering detachments into the front lines.

The Kharkov escape corridor has been narrowed from 60 to 37 miles during the past 48 hours, and as the struggle for the city entered its ninth day advices from the front indicated the Nazis would fight to the finish rather than attempt a strategic retreat.

Their losses were heavy, according to the Soviet communique, 3,000 officers and men being killed in two days of battle.

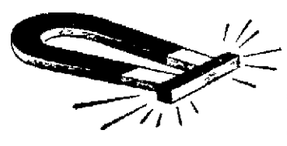
YOU CAN PUT AS MUCH WEAR on a motor in one minute, starting up with "dry" cylinder and piston walls, as you would in up to 200 miles of normal "warmed-up" driving.*

AND NOW THAT YOUR CAR STANDS IDLE more, oil has more time than ever to drain down from or dry off of piston and cylinder walls leaving the vital parts without effective lubrication when you start up. While that oil's getting back on the job, real damage can be done.



V.E.P. ALLOYED-OIL "STAYS PUT". This entirely new and different oil has a "magnetic-like" action which makes it cling to cylinder walls and pistons not only overnight but for weeks at a time. You need never worry—lubrication is there when and where it's needed.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1943.

Words are intended to express ideas, not to substitute for them.

This is a changing world—apparently nothing is permanent except human nature.

It's the school children who should be longing for "the good old days," when there wasn't nearly so much history to be learned.

'Fixed Incomes' and Living Costs

CITY EMPLOYES, like all other workers on fixed incomes, need more money to meet rising living costs and are asking for wage and salary increases.

The matter is now before council and thus far has not been discussed in open meeting, as is being asked by committees representing employes.

It seems quite obvious that, if accustomed standards of living are to be maintained by city employes, they must have more money, and it is also reasonable to assume that Mansfield's wage and salary scale for employes in various city departments should measure up to that of other Ohio cities of comparable size.

It should be kept in mind, however, that members of council are merely representatives of the people of Mansfield in the legislative branch of city government and that it is the taxpayers who are the real parties in interest in determining the amount of money to be made available for various municipal purposes.

Mansfield's low tax rate, usually referred to with pride, has had a hampering effect for many years on needed improvements and also plays a part in limiting funds available from year to year for additions to police and fire department personnel and for extensive wage and salary increases.

These are suitable subjects for frank discussion between employes, councilmen, and other city officials, with the public given opportunity to keep informed and in position to indicate approval or disapproval of planned action.

As it is current jumps in living costs that influence this effort to secure wage and salary increases there is natural objection to having the matter deferred until next year—if these increases are justified and taxpayers are willing to meet the added cost.

Complicated Simplification

SIMPLIFICATION of income tax reports is being tentatively promised, but any cheers may well be deferred until a later date as a Boston lawyer has been named consulting expert to study methods of simplification.

High as one's regard for lawyers may be—and usually is—their ideas of "simplification" sometimes follow weird lines, as, for instance, in the recent OPA effort to simplify its regulations by changing a section of an order establishing maximum prices on certain bakery products to read as follows:

"All commodities listed in Appendix A are those known to the trade as such excepting therefrom such thereof, if any, while subject to another regulation."

There is also the incident of the Minnesota young woman employed in a government office in Washington, whose mother was interested in learning what kind of work her daughter was doing. So the dutiful daughter wrote:

"I work in the data-analysis group of the aptitude-test subunit of the worker analysis section of the division of occupational analysis and manning tables of the bureau of labor utilization of the war manpower commission."

What Washington seems to need is a capable "simplifier"—even if it's necessary to go outside the bounds of lawyers and college professors to find one.

Dining Cars Losing Appeal

MEALS on dining cars have always been expensive, from the point of view of the average traveler. But they used to be very good and, as most people didn't travel often, they merely took a few extra dollars along, enjoyed the luxury of eating on the train and let it go at that.

Now the meals are just as expensive, and neither very good nor well served. Crowding and help shortage, not to mention marketing difficulties, are to blame. So instead of having a jolly feeling of paying a lot but liking what they got for it, people now leave the dining car with a sense of irritation.

Standing in long lines in the narrow passages has something to do with it. To add to this, some transcontinental trains serve but two meals a day. Luncheon is for servicemen only.

The passenger, used to his cup of tea at noon, misses it by 2 p. m., is restless by midafternoon and spends the last two hours before dinner in a state of irritability and discomfort. Next day he goes to breakfast later, and stuffs, but it does him no good. One sandwich with one cup of tea or coffee between 1 and 3 p. m. would obviate much discomfort and ill-will.

The real answer is not to travel in war time. But not everyone is lucky enough to have that choice.

Baseball As a Lifetime Job

MOST American boys would think playing baseball the ideal way to make a living. Yet the game, like other jobs, has its grumblers. One well known outfielder, who in a game may catch three flies, field three or four long hits, and come to bat four times, complained the other day: "Baseball fun? Where's the fun of getting out in the sun on a hot day, and running your head off?"

On the other hand, there is Mike Ryba, the one-man ball team of the Boston Red Sox. Mike has played, even in the big league, every position on the team. In the minor leagues he has at different times acted as manager, bat boy, ticket taker and bus driver. Perhaps because of the variety of his experience, Mike loves baseball. He has been at the game 18 years, and hopes to last 18 more.

Asked the other day whether he would want his 16-month son to become a ballplayer, Mike said: "I'm going to make him a ballplayer if I can. I wouldn't know what better thing I could give him."

It is the Mike Rybas, who love their work, that make good in baseball and in everything else.

In any event, a ballet dancer in a government agency would be expected to keep on his toes.

Russia's Co-operation Essential To Europe's Postwar Adjustment

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THIS COLUMN yesterday suggested that one of the problems likely to be discussed in the forthcoming conference between Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill is what policy will bring the best post-war co-operation among the United States, Russia and Britain in particular, and all the Allies in general.

This great issue, as I see it, contemplates the likelihood that the Soviet Union will emerge from the war the dominant power in Europe, and perhaps in the Orient as well. That's the way the cards are falling at present.

Now of course I don't know whether that subject will come before President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill. I just think it's so pressing that it almost inevitably must arise. Next to the winning of the war, there's no question of greater importance today.

Vice President Wallace pinned the thing down with startling bluntness last March when he declared:

"Unless the western democracies and Russia come to a satisfactory understanding before the war ends, I very much fear that World war No. 3 will be inevitable."

Mr. Wallace isn't the only one who foresees the possibility of conflicting interests. I found it all the way from England, through the Middle East, to Chungking, during my recent 35,000-mile tour. Now on the eve of the Allied conference we see this idea cropping up significantly in the British press.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's newspaper, the Yorkshire Post, says Premier Joseph Stalin was invited to attend the conference but wasn't able to accept.

The paper then warns that the "hour is at hand when it will be imperative for the United Nations to pursue a united course not only with regard to military operations but equally with regards to the politics of Europe."

The London Times—"The Thunderer"—stresses the necessity for unity among the Americans, British and Russians, and gives as a gloomy alternative "a fresh calamity for Europe." Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard expresses regret at Stalin's absence from the conference. The London Daily Herald says the "time has come when Britain, America and Russia should be announcing with a single voice their program for the restoration of political liberty to Europe."

WHAT'S the exact point of all this anxiety as the war rushes towards its end. We get many expressions of fear but people seem to be terrified of taking a peep into the closet to see what's there.

Actually, there's no dark secret involved, and no reason why it shouldn't be discussed. Better understanding of the problem might help solve the difficulties—if any.

The point is that many astute observers throughout the world believe Russia will, as already stated, dominate Europe and maybe the Far East. Because this would represent a volcanic political upheaval, a lot of countries are afraid of the consequences. They are particularly fearful lest Communism should be thrust upon them.

Russia is the world's largest country in area, occupying one sixth of the earth's surface and having a population of nearly 200,000,000. It is virtually self-contained, possessing almost every natural resource known to man. It stretches from Europe clear through to the Pacific—a two-continent empire.

Already it possesses a titantic strength which potentially would seem to be unlimited. Militarily it's virtually impregnable. Its position as a military power has been established by sensational achievements on the battle field.

All these circumstances combine to make Russia heir to the politico-economic-military domination of central and eastern Europe which Hitler threw away when he started out to beat the world. The Soviet influence in the Far East long has been great, and the war will enhance it.

So there, in a very sketchy way, are the fundamental facts of the situation. The problem is to work out some agreement among the major powers which will prevent the circumstances from developing adversely.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Monday, August 13, 1923.

Winfield Scott Houston, 75, died at his home, 134 Park avenue east. He was a Civil war veteran.

Rev. Dr. F. W. Rohlfing, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, received call to pastorate of church in Lima.

Members of Exchange club held outing at Melco with D. H. Robinson and Fred Wachter as hosts.

Samuel K. Glenn, 58, former Mansfield resident, was killed in automobile accident near Shreve.

William G. Schwan left on a motor trip to Kansas, where Mrs. Schwan had been visiting.

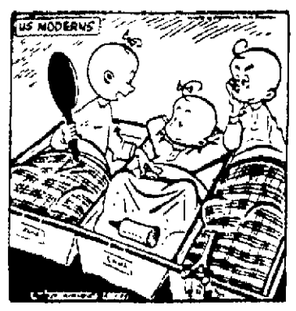
Classes in tennis playing were opened at Y. W. C. A. with Miss Elma Patterson as instructor.

Mr and Mrs. George B. Kirschbaum, 97 North Main street, left for northern Michigan on their annual two-months camping trip.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Manteo of the Croatan tribe of Amerindians, was baptised and received into the Church of England, at Roanoke Island (North Carolina), Aug. 13, 1587, and thus became the first native Christian in the 13 Colonies.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT



"Do you think I'm beginning to show my age?"

Dave Boone Says:

WINNIE CHURCHILL has hopped the ocean again for a conference with President Roosevelt. This time the important item won't be to determine where they've been or where they are, but where they are going. Our side is winning faster than was expected and the demand of the moment is a program just in case of an early victory.

* * *

Joe Stalin will be conspicuous by his absence as usual. I wish he would get to one of these meetings, but he's in a tough spot and doing such a swell job against the enemy just now that he can be pardoned for sending excuses.

* * *

I see where Mussolini, just before he fell from the balcony and suffered a concussion of the chins, said Italy could easily have been kept out of the war. You can hear all Italy greeting that one with a loud, "this is a fine time to tell us."

* * *

Benito said that to have kept out of the war would have meant that Italy would have branded herself a small nation instead of a great one. That's where those dictators go so far wrong. They worry about the size of a nation instead of the quality.

Today's Thought.

We believe in converting the heathen, but it is fortunate they can't be here to see how we act after we have been converted for thousands of years.—Kansas City Times.

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

WELL the cost of living has dropped eight-tenths of one per cent and now will you stop screaming about high prices?

This is the first recorded drop since we got into the war and if the present dizzy downward pace continues, the cost of living will be down to pre-war levels within the next few centuries.

* * *

But eight-tenths of one per cent is not to be sniggled at.

* * *

A fellow could lay something by for a rainy day out of that. Well maybe not exactly rainy . . . but misty anyway.

* * *

Imagine going into a bank and asking "what's a good investment I can pick up for eighth-tenths of one cent on the dollar?"

* * *

About the only thing they could suggest would be German war bonds.

* * *

Maybe not now but soon.

* * *

Thought for the day: Inflation checked . . . eight-tenths of one per cent.

Timely Editorial

Sensible Change.

The people of Canada and the United States in this and all succeeding generations will be deeply grateful to their respective governments for the decision to drop that synthetic monstrosity "Alcan" as a name for the recently completed highway from the international boundary to Alaska. The road is to be called, quite simply and sensibly, what it is, the "Alaska Highway."

"Alcan" was kindly intended and doubtless was born of considerable brain fag on the part of its originator. It strove to perpetuate Canada's share in the undertaking, a quite considerable one, since by far the greater part of the road is built on Canadian territory, together with an indication of the road's final destination, Alaska. The resultant combination was never graciously received, at least in Canada, where most newspapers unkindly suggested that "Alcan" sounds more like something that comes from the druggist's than like a great military and engineering achievement.—Montreal Star.

Company Seeking Higher Prices Pays Big Salaries and Bonuses

WASHINGTON—If the Boren committee really wants to dig below the surface in the newsprint situation, it might probe the lush bonuses paid by the International Paper company to its executives.

At a time when the paper cartel has been gouging publishers for higher prices and throttling newspapers by supplying less paper, it has also been paying juicy sums to International Paper officials.

Since 1930, International Paper has not paid a penny in dividends on its common stock. Yet at the same time International Paper has paid annual salaries of $412,250 to six of its officials. Then in addition to these salaries, the same officials got bonuses of $112,500.

President Richard J. Cullen received a salary of $102,000 plus an additional $50,000 paid every year toward a retirement fund.

The vice president, W. N. Hurlbut, gets a salary of $43,600 and in addition a retirement benefit of $10,000 annually. Also, Hurlbut has borrowed $25,893 from the company. There is nothing illegal about this, though borrowing by officials, from their company is a special privilege and constitutes an additional burden on the company's financial position.

In addition to its officers and directors, International Paper also paid 14 other employes total salaries of $383,900.

Isolationist Cupid.

THE NUPTIAL rumor that the Chicago Tribune's Col. Robert R. McCormick was going to wed Mrs. Helen Essary, widow of the Baltimore Sun correspondent, was told to the president by one of his aides.

Both Col. McCormick and Mrs. Essary are ardent isolationists and vigorous critics of the administration. In fact the colonel is considered the leading isolationist of the midwest, if not the nation, while the Widow Essary, writing in the Washington Times-Herald, is probably the leading lady isolationist in the nation's capitol.

So the president received word of this isolationist romance with considerable interest.

"I wonder," he mused, "what their progeny will be, like."

Note—Later, Mrs. Essary heard about the president's remark and telephoned one of the White House aides to find out precisely what had been said. She did not comment as to whether the rumor of matrimony were true or untrue, but she showed great feminine curiosity regarding the president's comment.

Inside Europe.

SWISS Minister Charles Bruggmann, brother-in-law of Henry Wallace, is probably the only man in the United States who has recently passed through Germany.

He not ony visited Germany, but also France and Spain. In France he found the people downcast and downhearted. German soldiers on the streets of Paris went out of their way to be polite to the French people, even got off the sidewalks if necessary in deference to a Frenchman. The Germans have played their cards cleverly to try to avoid French resentment.

In Germany the women wore black, but no smiles. Many Germans, Minister Bruggmann found, would rather submit to a British-American occupation than one by the Russians. Higher-class Germans fear the Russians tremendously. On the other hand, it is suspected in some quarters that certain German groups might make a deal with the Russians to run Europe together.

There is more food in Germany, Minister Bruggmann found, than in France. In Paris he paid $40 for a meal for two people, and not an elaborate meal at that.

Spain is in better shape economically than at any time in some years, and seems to have recovered from the effects of its civil war.

Day vs. Night Bombing.

WHEN Churchill and Roosevelt were in Casablanca, the British prime minister had a friendly argument with U. S. air generals regarding the feasibility of daylight bombing. Churchill was against it, arguing that the British system of night bombing was much safer, did more damage to the enemy.

However, latest figures just received by the war department show that Gen. Ira Eaker was right in sticking to day bombing. These figures show that U. S. bombers have knocked out Nazi fighter planes at a rate ten times greater than the British.

Here are the figures: In July U. S. airmen destroyed 500 Axis planes, lost 108 bombers of their own. In other words we knocked out five times as many planes as we lost.

In the same months, the British knocked out 129 enemy planes, but lost 258 of their own. In other words, the British lost two planes for every one they knocked out.

The British were operating at night when they could not see the enemy so well, but also when the enemy could not see them. American planes, operating in the daylight, could better concentrate on enemy fighter planes, but also were better targets for the enemy.

Merry-Go-Round.

WHEN South Carolina's Senator Burnet Maybank voted against the administration recently, Walter Brown, in Justice Byrnes' office, mailed Maybank a copy of one of his campaign circulars. In it Maybank had vowed that he would support the president under all circumstances, come what may. Under this pledge, Brown scribbled "Lest we forget, lest we forget," and mailed it to the senator. . . . When the coast guard cutter "Escanaba" was sunk in the North Atlantic in June, press reports said that 58 out of her 60 men were lost. It was true that only two survived, but the loss was heavier, since 60 is her peace time complement, and she carries many more men in war time. . . . The two Escanaba survivors are on a tour of war plants.

ERNIE PYLE, Roving Reporter

Being Among the Wounded and Dying Emphasizes Stark Reality of Warfare.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—It was flabbergasting to lie among a tentful of wounded soldiers recently and hear them cuss and beg to be sent right back into the fight.

Of course not all of them do. It depends on the severity of their wounds, and on their individual personalities, just as it would in peacetime. But I will say that at least a third of the moderately wounded men ask if they can't be returned to duty immediately.

When I took sick I was with the 45th Division, made up largely of men from Oklahoma and west Texas. You don't realize how different certain parts of our country are from others until you see their men set off in a frame, as it were, in some strange faraway place like this.

The men of Oklahoma are drawling and soft-spoken. They are not smart-alecks. Something of the purity of the soil seems to be in them. Even their cussing is simpler and more profound than the torrential obscenities of eastern city men. An Oklahoman of the plains is straight and direct. He is slow to criticize and hard to anger, but once he is convinced of the wrong of something, brother, watch out.

These wounded men of Oklahoma have got madder about the war than anybody I have seen on this side of the ocean.

And these quiet men of the 45th, the newest division over here, have already fought so well they have drawn high praise of the commanding general of the corps of which the division is a part.

* * *

IT WAS these men from the farms, ranches and small towns of Oklahoma who poured through my tent with their wounds. I lay there and listened for what each one would say first.

One fellow, seeing a friend, called out, "I think I'm gonna make her." Meaning he was going to pull through.

Another said, "Have they got beds in the hospital? Lord how I want to go to bed."

Another said, "I'm hungry, but I can't eat anything. I keep getting sick at my stomach."

Another said, as he winced from their probing for a deeply buried piece of shrapnel in his leg, "Go ahead, you're the doc. I can stand it."

Another said, "I'll have to write the old lady tonight and tell her she missed out on that $10,000 again."

Another, who was put down beside me, said, "Hi, Pop, how you getting along? I call you Pop because you're gray-headed. You don't mind, do you?

I told him I didn't care what he called me. He was friendly, but you could tell from his forward attitude that he was not from Oklahoma. When I asked him, it turned out he was from New Jersey.

One big blond Oklahoman had slight flesh wounds in the face and the back of his neck. He had a patch on his upper lip which prevented his moving it, and made him talk in a grave, straight-faced manner that was comical. I've never seen anybody so mad in my life. He went from one doctor to another trying to get somebody to sign his card returning him to duty.

The doctors explained patiently that if he returned to the front his wounds would get infected and he would be a burden on his company instead of a help. They tried to entice him by telling him there would be nurses back in the hospital. But he said, "To hell with the nurses, I want to get back to fightin'."

DYING men were brought into our tent, men whose death rattle silenced the conversation and made all the rest of us grave.

When a man was almost gone the surgeons would put a piece of gauze over his face. He could breathe through it but we couldn't see his face well.

Twice within five minutes chaplains came running. One of these occasions haunted me for hours.

The man was still semi-conscious. The chaplain knelt down beside him and two ward boys squatted alongside. The chaplain said:

"John, I'm going to say a prayer for you."

Somehow this stark announcement hit me like a hammer. He didn't say, "I'm going to pray for you to get well," he just said he was going to say a prayer, and it was obvious he meant the final prayer. It was as though he had said, "Brother, you may not know it, but your goose is cooked."

He said a short prayer, and the weak, gasping man tried in vain to repeat the words after him. When he had finished the chaplain said, "John, you're doing fine, you're doing fine." Then he rose and dashed off on other business, and the ward boys went about their duties.

The dying man was left utterly alone, just lying there on his litter on the ground, lying in an aisle, because the tent was full. Of course it couldn't be otherwise, but the awful aloneness of that man as he went through the last few minutes of his life was what tormented me. I felt like going over and at least holding his hand while he died, but it would have been out of order and I didn't do it. I wish now I had.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Little Turkeys

MY WIFE'S young turkeys—27 of them, a month old—she put into a little pen at the corner of the pond along the dam breast. There they have shade from a willow shoot, a neat private drinking pool, and a patch of grass to peck at. One side of their range is a big fruit tree box which shelters the feeders and also the wire-floored sleeping box, where they spend the nights without danger of huddling.

One of the greatest dangers to young turkey poults is that they may chill, toward morning, and pile up in a corner. By allowing them to roost on wire mesh with air space below, they cannot smother each other no matter how closely packed. The droppings can be conserved and the quarters kept clean by lining the floor below the mesh with old newspapers or clean straw.

By the time the young turkeys outgrow this box, they will roost very well in a tree or upon a lattice of poles with a lantern lighted below to keep 'varmints' off and perhaps the watchdog chained nearby for additional protection.

Turkeys are shy and winsome individuals. They add a bit of glamour to the barnyard. Their queer prrt, prrt,—the frightened hiss, the dainty pecks of grain and grass, their heads tipped back about the watering place, the sudden strut of a very young turkey cock. Aside from their cash value at Thanksgiving or Christmastime, they make pleasant company. It is fun to stand and watch them.

One night eight came up missing. The children had shut them in and the mother, going out after dark to check, found the numbers depleted. Skunk scent was in the air, too, all along the valley. She called me, and we hunted with lighted lantern, through every clump of weeds or bush within reasonable distance. It was very late when we thought it no use. The birds were gone. We went somberly to bed.

Next morning the turkeys came to light wedged into a narrow V behind their roosting box, beneath the overhang. One—the largest of all—was dead, trampled by the others.

Now there are 26.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1943.

Words are intended to express ideas, not to substitute for them.

This is a changing world—apparently nothing is permanent except human nature.

It's the school children who should be longing for "the good old days," when there wasn't nearly so much history to be learned.

'Fixed Incomes' and Living Costs

CITY EMPLOYES, like all other workers on fixed incomes, need more money to meet rising living costs and are asking for wage and salary increases.

The matter is now before council and thus far has not been discussed in open meeting, as is being asked by committees representing employes.

It seems quite obvious that, if accustomed standards of living are to be maintained by city employes, they must have more money, and it is also reasonable to assume that Mansfield's wage and salary scale for employes in various city departments should measure up to that of other Ohio cities of comparable size.

It should be kept in mind, however, that members of council are merely representatives of the people of Mansfield in the legislative branch of city government and that it is the taxpayers who are the real parties in interest in determining the amount of money to be made available for various municipal purposes.

Mansfield's low tax rate, usually referred to with pride, has had a hampering effect for many years on needed improvements and also plays a part in limiting funds available from year to year for additions to police and fire department personnel and for extensive wage and salary increases.

These are suitable subjects for frank discussion between employes, councilmen, and other city officials, with the public given opportunity to keep informed and in position to indicate approval or disapproval of planned action.

As it is current jumps in living costs that influence this effort to secure wage and salary increases there is natural objection to having the matter deferred until next year—if these increases are justified and taxpayers are willing to meet the added cost.

Complicated Simplification

SIMPLIFICATION of income tax reports is being tentatively promised, but any cheers may well be deferred until a later date as a Boston lawyer has been named consulting expert to study methods of simplification.

High as one's regard for lawyers may be—and usually is—their ideas of "simplification" sometimes follow weird lines, as, for instance, in the recent OPA effort to simplify its regulations by changing a section of an order establishing maximum prices on certain bakery products to read as follows:

"All commodities listed in Appendix A are those known to the trade as such excepting therefrom such thereof, if any, while subject to another regulation."

There is also the incident of the Minnesota young woman employed in a government office in Washington, whose mother was interested in learning what kind of work her daughter was doing. So the dutiful daughter wrote:

"I work in the data-analysis group of the aptitude-test subunit of the worker analysis section of the division of occupational analysis and manning tables of the bureau of labor utilization of the war manpower commission."

What Washington seems to need is a capable "simplifier"—even if it's necessary to go outside the bounds of lawyers and college professors to find one.

Dining Cars Losing Appeal

MEALS on dining cars have always been expensive, from the point of view of the average traveler. But they used to be very good and, as most people didn't travel often, they merely took a few extra dollars along, enjoyed the luxury of eating on the train and let it go at that.

Now the meals are just as expensive, and neither very good nor well served. Crowding and help shortage, not to mention marketing difficulties, are to blame. So instead of having a jolly feeling of paying a lot but liking what they got for it, people now leave the dining car with a sense of irritation.

Standing in long lines in the narrow passages has something to do with it. To add to this, some transcontinental trains serve but two meals a day. Luncheon is for servicemen only.

The passenger, used to his cup of tea at noon, misses it by 2 p. m., is restless by midafternoon and spends the last two hours before dinner in a state of irritability and discomfort. Next day he goes to breakfast later, and stuffs, but it does him no good. One sandwich with one cup of tea or coffee between 1 and 3 p. m. would obviate much discomfort and ill-will.

The real answer is not to travel in war time. But not everyone is lucky enough to have that choice.

Baseball As a Lifetime Job

MOST American boys would think playing baseball the ideal way to make a living. Yet the game, like other jobs, has its grumblers. One well known outfielder, who in a game may catch three flies, field three or four long hits, and come to bat four times, complained the other day: "Baseball fun? Where's the fun of getting out in the sun on a hot day, and running your head off?"

On the other hand, there is Mike Ryba, the one-man ball team of the Boston Red Sox. Mike has played, even in the big league, every position on the team. In the minor leagues he has at different times acted as manager, bat boy, ticket taker and bus driver. Perhaps because of the variety of his experience, Mike loves baseball. He has been at the game 18 years, and hopes to last 18 more.

Asked the other day whether he would want his 16-month son to become a ballplayer, Mike said: "I'm going to make him a ballplayer if I can. I wouldn't know what better thing I could give him."

It is the Mike Rybas, who love their work, that make good in baseball and in everything else.

In any event, a ballet dancer in a government agency would be expected to keep on his toes.

Russia's Co-operation Essential To Europe's Postwar Adjustment

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THIS COLUMN yesterday suggested that one of the problems likely to be discussed in the forthcoming conference between Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill is what policy will bring the best post-war co-operation among the United States, Russia and Britain in particular, and all the Allies in general.

This great issue, as I see it, contemplates the likelihood that the Soviet Union will emerge from the war the dominant power in Europe, and perhaps in the Orient as well. That's the way the cards are falling at present.

Now of course I don't know whether that subject will come before President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill. I just think it's so pressing that it almost inevitably must arise. Next to the winning of the war, there's no question of greater importance today.

Vice President Wallace pinned the thing down with startling bluntness last March when he declared:

"Unless the western democracies and Russia come to a satisfactory understanding before the war ends, I very much fear that World war No. 3 will be inevitable."

Mr. Wallace isn't the only one who foresees the possibility of conflicting interests. I found it all the way from England, through the Middle East, to Chungking, during my recent 35,000-mile tour. Now on the eve of the Allied conference we see this idea cropping up significantly in the British press.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's newspaper, the Yorkshire Post, says Premier Joseph Stalin was invited to attend the conference but wasn't able to accept.

The paper then warns that the "hour is at hand when it will be imperative for the United Nations to pursue a united course not only with regard to military operations but equally with regards to the politics of Europe."

The London Times—"The Thunderer"—stresses the necessity for unity among the Americans, British and Russians, and gives as a gloomy alternative "a fresh calamity for Europe." Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard expresses regret at Stalin's absence from the conference. The London Daily Herald says the "time has come when Britain, America and Russia should be announcing with a single voice their program for the restoration of political liberty to Europe."

WHAT'S the exact point of all this anxiety as the war rushes towards its end. We get many expressions of fear but people seem to be terrified of taking a peep into the closet to see what's there.

Actually, there's no dark secret involved, and no reason why it shouldn't be discussed. Better understanding of the problem might help solve the difficulties—if any.

The point is that many astute observers throughout the world believe Russia will, as already stated, dominate Europe and maybe the Far East. Because this would represent a volcanic political upheaval, a lot of countries are afraid of the consequences. They are particularly fearful lest Communism should be thrust upon them.

Russia is the world's largest country in area, occupying one sixth of the earth's surface and having a population of nearly 200,000,000. It is virtually self-contained, possessing almost every natural resource known to man. It stretches from Europe clear through to the Pacific—a two-continent empire.

Already it possesses a titantic strength which potentially would seem to be unlimited. Militarily it's virtually impregnable. Its position as a military power has been established by sensational achievements on the battle field.

All these circumstances combine to make Russia heir to the politico-economic-military domination of central and eastern Europe which Hitler threw away when he started out to beat the world. The Soviet influence in the Far East long has been great, and the war will enhance it.

So there, in a very sketchy way, are the fundamental facts of the situation. The problem is to work out some agreement among the major powers which will prevent the circumstances from developing adversely.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Monday, August 13, 1923.

Winfield Scott Houston, 75, died at his home, 134 Park avenue east. He was a Civil war veteran.

Rev. Dr. F. W. Rohlfing, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, received call to pastorate of church in Lima.

Members of Exchange club held outing at Melco with D. H. Robinson and Fred Wachter as hosts.

Samuel K. Glenn, 58, former Mansfield resident, was killed in automobile accident near Shreve.

William G. Schwan left on a motor trip to Kansas, where Mrs. Schwan had been visiting.

Classes in tennis playing were opened at Y. W. C. A. with Miss Elma Patterson as instructor.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Kirschbaum, 97 North Main street, left for northern Michigan on their annual two-months camping trip.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Manteo of the Croatan tribe of Americindians, was baptised and received into the Church of England, at Roanoke Island (North Carolina), Aug. 13, 1587, and thus became the first native Christian in the 13 Colonies.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Do you think I'm beginning to show my age?"

Dave Boone Says:

WINNIE CHURCHILL has hopped the ocean again for a conference with President Roosevelt. This time the important item won't be to determine where they've been or where they are, but where they are going. Our side is winning faster than was expected and the demand of the moment is a program just in case of an early victory.

* * *

Joe Stalin will be conspicuous by his absence as usual. I wish he would get to one of these meetings, but he's in a tough spot and doing such a swell job against the enemy just now that he can be pardoned for sending excuses.

* * *

I see where Mussolini, just before he fell from the balcony and suffered a concussion of the chins, said Italy could easily have been kept out of the war. You can hear all Italy greeting that one with a loud, "this is a fine time to tell us."

* * *

Benito said that to have kept out of the war would have meant that Italy would have branded herself a small nation instead of a great one. That's where those dictators go so far wrong. They worry about the size of a nation instead of the quality.

Today's Thought.

We believe in converting the heathen, but it is fortunate they can't be here to see how we act after we have been converted for thousands of years.—Kansas City Times.

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

WELL the cost of living has dropped eight-tenths of one per cent and now will you stop screaming about high prices?

This is the first recorded drop since we got into the war and if the present dizzy downward pace continues, the cost of living will be down to pre-war levels within the next few centuries.

* * *

But eight-tenths of one per cent is not to be sniggled at.

* * *

A fellow could lay something by for a rainy day out of that. Well maybe not exactly rainy . . . but misty anyway.

* * *

Imagine going into a bank and asking "what's a good investment I can pick up for eighth-tenths of one cent on the dollar?"

* * *

About the only thing they could suggest would be German war bonds.

* * *

Maybe not now but soon.

* * *

Thought for the day: Inflation checked . . . eight-tenths of one per cent.

Timely Editorial

Sensible Change.

The people of Canada and the United States in this and all succeeding generations will be deeply grateful to their respective governments for the decision to drop that synthetic monstrosity "Alcan" as a name for the recently completed highway from the international boundary to Alaska. The road is to be called, quite simply and sensibly, what it is, the "Alaska Highway."

"Alcan" was kindly intended and doubtless was born of considerable brain fag on the part of its originator. It strove to perpetuate Canada's share in the undertaking, a quite considerable one, since by far the greater part of the road is built on Canadian territory, together with an indication of the road's final destination, Alaska. The resultant combination was never graciously received, at least in Canada, where most newspapers unkindly suggested that "Alcan" sounds more like something that comes from the druggist's than like a great military and engineering achievement.—Montreal Star.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Company Seeking Higher Prices Pays Big Salaries and Bonuses

WASHINGTON—If the Boren committee really wants to dig below the surface in the newsprint situation, it might probe the lush bonuses paid by the International Paper company to its executives.

At a time when the paper cartel has been gouging publishers for higher prices and throttling newspapers by supplying less paper, it has also been paying juicy sums to International Paper officials.

Since 1930, International Paper has not paid a penny in dividends on its common stock. Yet at the same time International Paper has paid annual salaries of $412,250 to six of its officials. Then in addition to these salaries, the same officials got bonuses of $112,500.

President Richard J. Cullen received a salary of $102,000 plus an additional $50,000 paid every year toward a retirement fund.

The vice president, W. N. Hurlbut, gets a salary of $43,600 and in addition a retirement benefit of $10,000 annually. Also, Hurlbut has borrowed $25,893 from the company. There is nothing illegal about this, though borrowing by officials, from their company is a special privilege and constitutes an additional burden on the company's financial position.

In addition to its officers and directors, International Paper also paid 14 other employes total salaries of $383,900.

Isolationist Cupid.

THE NUPTIAL rumor that the Chicago Tribune's Col. Robert R. McCormick was going to wed Mrs. Helen Essary, widow of the Baltimore Sun correspondent, was told to the president by one of his aides.

Both Col. McCormick and Mrs. Essary are ardent isolationists and vigorous critics of the administration. In fact the colonel is considered the leading isolationist of the midwest, if not the nation, while the Widow Essary, writing in the Washington Times-Herald, is probably the leading lady isolationist in the nation's capitol.

So the president received word of this isolationist romance with considerable interest.

"I wonder," he mused, "what their progeny will be like."

Note—Later, Mrs. Essary heard about the president's remark and telephoned one of the White House aides to find out precisely what had been said. She did not comment as to whether the rumor of matrimony were true or untrue, but she showed great feminine curiosity regarding the president's comment.

Inside Europe.

SWISS Minister Charles Bruggmann, brother-in-law of Henry Wallace, is probably the only man in the United States who has recently passed through Germany.

He not ony visited Germany, but also France and Spain. In France he found the people downcast and downhearted. German soldiers on the streets of Paris went out of their way to be polite to the French people, even got off the sidewalks if necessary in deference to a Frenchman. The Germans have played their cards cleverly to try to avoid French resentment.

In Germany the women wore black, but no smiles. Many Germans, Minister Bruggmann found, would rather submit to a British-American occupation than one by the Russians. Higher-class Germans fear the Russians tremendously. On the other hand, it is suspected in some quarters that certain German groups might make a deal with the Russians to run Europe together.

There is more food in Germany, Minister Bruggmann found, than in France. In Paris he paid $40 for a meal for two people, and not an elaborate meal at that.

Spain is in better shape economically than at any time in some years, and seems to have recovered from the effects of its civil war.

Day vs. Night Bombing.

WHEN Churchill and Roosevelt were in Casablanca, the British prime minister had a friendly argument with U. S. air generals regarding the feasibility of daylight bombing. Churchill was against it, arguing that the British system of night bombing was much safer, did more damage to the enemy.

However, latest figures just received by the war department show that Gen. Ira Eaker was right in sticking to day bombing. These figures show that U. S. bombers have knocked out Nazi fighter planes at a rate ten times greater than the British.

Here are the figures: In July U. S. airmen destroyed 500 Axis planes, lost 108 bombers of their own. In other words we knocked out five times as many planes as we lost.

In the same months, the British knocked out 129 enemy planes, but lost 258 of their own. In other words, the British lost two planes for every one they knocked out.

The British were operating at night when they could not see the enemy so well, but also when the enemy could not see them. American planes, operating in the daylight, could better concentrate on enemy fighter planes, but also were better targets for the enemy.

Merry-Go-Round.

WHEN South Carolina's Senator Burnet Maybank voted against the administration recently, Walter Brown, in Justice Byrnes' office, mailed Maybank a copy of one of his campaign circulars. In it Maybank had vowed that he would support the president under all circumstances, come what may. Under this pledge, Brown scribbled "Lest we forget, lest we forget," and mailed it to the senator. . . . When the coast guard cutter "Escanaba" was sunk in the North Atlantic in June, press reports said that 58 out of her 60 men were lost. It was true that only two survived, but the loss was heavier, since 69 is her peace time complement, and she carries many more men in war time. . . . The two Escanaba survivors are on a tour of war plants.

ERNIE PYLE, Roving Reporter

Being Among the Wounded and Dying Emphasizes Stark Reality of Warfare.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—It was flabbergasting to lie among a tentful of wounded soldiers recently and hear them cuss and beg to be sent right back into the fight.

Of course not all of them do. It depends on the severity of their wounds, and on their individual personalities, just as it would in peacetime. But I will say that at least a third of the moderately wounded men ask if they can't be returned to duty immediately.

When I took sick I was with the 45th Division, made up largely of men from Oklahoma and west Texas. You don't realize how different certain parts of our country are from others until you see their men set off in a frame, as it were, in some strange far-away place like this.

The men of Oklahoma are drawling and soft-spoken. They are not smart-alecks. Something of the purity of the soil seems to be in them. Even their cussing is simpler and more profound than the torrential obscenities of eastern city men. An Oklahoman of the plains is straight and direct. He is slow to criticize and hard to anger, but once he is convinced of the wrong of something, brother, watch out.

These wounded men of Oklahoma have got madder about the war than anybody I have seen on this side of the ocean.

And these quiet men of the 45th, the newest division over here, have already fought so well they have drawn high praise of the commanding general of the corps of which the division is a part.

* * *

IT WAS these men from the farms, ranches and small towns of Oklahoma who poured through my tent with their wounds. I lay there and listened for what each one would say first.

One fellow, seeing a friend, called out, "I think I'm gonna make her." Meaning he was going to pull through.

Another said, "Have they got beds in the hospital? Lord how I want to go to bed."

Another said, "I'm hungry, but I can't eat anything. I keep getting sick at my stomach."

Another said, as he winced from their probing for a deeply buried piece of shrapnel in his leg, "Go ahead, you're the doc. I can stand it."

Another said, "I'll have to write the old lady tonight and tell her she missed out on that $10,000 again."

Another, who was put down beside me, said, "Hi, Pop, how you getting along? I call you Pop because you're gray-headed. You don't mind, do you?

I told him I didn't care what he called me. He was friendly, but you could tell from his forward attitude that he was not from Oklahoma. When I asked him, it turned out he was from New Jersey.

One big blond Oklahoman had slight flesh wounds in the face and the back of his neck. He had a patch on his upper lip which prevented his moving it, and made him talk in a grave, straight-faced manner that was comical. I've never seen anybody so mad in my life. He went from one doctor to another trying to get somebody to sign his card returning him to duty.

The doctors explained patiently that if he returned to the front his wounds would get infected and he would be a burden on his company instead of a help. They tried to entice him by telling him there would be nurses back in the hospital. But he said, "To hell with the nurses. I want to get back to fightin'."

DYING men were brought into our tent, men whose death rattle silenced the conversation and made all the rest of us grave.

When a man was almost gone the surgeons would put a piece of gauze over his face. He could breathe through it but we couldn't see his face well.

Twice within five minutes chaplains came running. One of these occasions haunted me for hours.

The man was still semi-conscious. The chaplain knelt down beside him and two ward boys squatted alongside. The chaplain said:

"John, I'm going to say a prayer for you."

Somehow this stark announcement hit me like a hammer. He didn't say, "I'm going to pray for you to get well," he just said he was going to say a prayer, and it was obvious he meant the final prayer. It was as though he had said, "Brother, you may not know it, but your goose is cooked."

He said a short prayer, and the weak, gasping man tried in vain to repeat the words after him. When he had finished the chaplain said, "John, you're doing fine, you're doing fine." Then he rose and dashed off on other business, and the ward boys went about their duties.

The dying man was left utterly alone, just lying there on his litter on the ground, lying in an aisle, because the tent was full. Of course it couldn't be otherwise, but the awful aloneness of that man as he went through the last few minutes of his life was what tormented me. I felt like going over and at least holding his hand while he died, but it would have been out of order and I didn't do it. I wish now I had.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Little Turkeys

MY WIFE'S young turkeys—27 of them, a month old—she put into a little pen at the corner of the pond along the dam breast. There they have shade from a willow shoot, a neat private drinking pool, and a patch of grass to peck at. One side of their range is a big fruit tree box which shelters the feeders and also the wire-floored sleeping box, where they spend the nights without danger of huddling.

One of the greatest dangers to young turkey poults is that they may chill, toward morning, and pile up in a corner. By allowing them to roost on wire mesh with air space below, they cannot smother each other no matter how closely packed. The droppings can be conserved and the quarters kept clean by lining the floor below the mesh with old newspapers or clean straw.

By the time the young turkeys outgrow this box, they will roost very well in a tree or upon a lattice of poles with a lantern lighted below to keep 'varmints' off and perhaps the watchdog chained nearby for additional protection.

Turkeys are shy and winsome individuals. They add a bit of glamour to the barnyard. Their queer prrt, prrt,—the frightened hiss, the dainty pecks of grain and grass, their heads tipped back about the watering place, the sudden strut of a very young turkey cock. Aside from their cash value at Thanksgiving or Christmastime, they make pleasant company. It is fun to stand and watch them.

One night eight came up missing. The children had shut them in and the mother, going out after dark to check, found the numbers depleted. Skunk scent was in the air, too, all along the valley. She called me, and we hunted with lighted lantern, through every clump of weeds or bush within reasonable distance. It was very late when we thought it no use. The birds were gone. We went somberly to bed.

Next morning the turkeys came to light wedged into a narrow V behind their roosting box, beneath the overhang. One—the largest of all—was dead, trampled by the others.

Now there are 26.

Army Men Learn To Respect Their New Routines

For years regular army men have interpreted reveille's bugle call as "You gotta get up, you gotta get up," but the new army of selectees has put new words to this recurring daily tune. "You gotta clean up, you gotta clean up," is what it says to them. Geting up is only incidental to the day-long business of cleanliness.

There is little doubt that America's young men are learning to respect the power of soap and water as never before, and to realize that the pursuit of cleanliness is not restricted to woman's domain. "I shall make some woman an awfully good wife," remarked one recruit telling of his prowess with the mop, broom, and dishpan.

"Cleanliness begins each morning with a wholesale scrubbing of floors and windows and the tidying and aligning of beds and lockers," a young private recently informed his mother. "It continues at march and drill and functions at night when prospects of an inspection of the following morning require that you clean equipment which cannot be sent to the ordinary laundry. Here the individual army man becomes all important, because one man's defection may ruin the appearance of an entire platoon or even a company, and subject from 50 to 250 men to the loss of special privileges they might otherwise have gained."

The selectees in one camp have their own way of handling the occasional chap who is careless about personal cleanliness. His tent mates give him a bath with a stiff brush, stand over him thrice a day while he brushes his teeth, wake him half an hour before reveille to make sure that he washes, shaves and combs his hair, so that he will not bring further disgrace upon himself and his outfit.

"This sort of supervision will be over lot until you no longer need any special urging," writes the selectee. "And then you get a big surprise. You find you have acquired the cleanliness habit, and you find you enjoy it."

Hand-Crocheted Spreads May Be Easily Tubbed

If you have a hand crocheted cotton bedspread stored away for occasions when you want to make a particular impression why not use it and enjoy it? You can confidently entrust it to soap and water as often as necessary. With normal everyday use and frequent washing, it is likely to last just as long as if it were left to grow musty and yellow on a shelf.

When the time comes for washing fill the tub with an ample quantity of warm soapsuds, immerse the spread, and squeeze the suds through it again and again. Keep the lather brisk and lively by adding soap often or remove the spread and whip up a new lather when the water grows soiled and the suds die down. You need fresh live suds, and plenty of them, to wash a fine bedspread clean.

Rinse several times in warm water and press out the excess gently, holding all of the spread in both hands to keep the weight of the water from stretching strands out of shape. Pin the spread to a clean sheet before hanging it to dry. If pressing is needed to bring out the design use an almost-cold iron and press on the wrong side.

Unless there is a military advantage otherwise, the army's policy is to keep twins in the same organization.

GOLDEN EAGLES OF COLORADO REAL FRIEND TO THE FARMERS

(By International News Service)

BOULDER, Colo. — If you've been under the illusion that the eagle, the bird which Americans revere as a national emblem, is a frequent killer of domestic animals and protected wild game, you are wrong, according to Malcolm Jollie graduate student in biology at the University of Colorado.

"Contrary to popular belief, eagles seldom attack barnyard fowl, lambs, or fawns, and because they kill rodents harmful to crops they are a real friend of the farmer," declares Jollie who is studying the habits of the golden eagles in the Boulder area as a thesis project in his work toward an M. S. degree in biology.

Jollie hopes to complete his study before entering military service next month.

"There have been a few accurate reports of eagles in pairs, probably driven by extreme hunger, attacking sheep or deer, but such instances are rare," the biology student said. "Usually they will carry away only lambs or fawns already dead before sighted by the eagles. Since eagles weigh only from about eight to 12 pounds, obviously it is impossible for them to carry away a heavy animal. Only on rare occasions do they attack barnyard fowl."

Because eagles kill many small rodents harmful to crops, they are beneficial to man and it is unwise to shoot them, Jollie maintains.

"In some states where farmers have demanded that bounties be placed on these birds, they usually have saved only $1 worth of domestic fowl to every $10 in crop losses suffered because of the destruction of these enemies of harmful rodents."

Jollie has used two golden eagles in his studies to locate nests in the Boulder area and to bring other eagles into sight where their reactions might be studied.

Apache, a female which Jollie took from a nest on a cliff when about six weeks old, he managed to tame after three weeks of working with her. More recently he has worked with Junior, an eight-year-old male presented to him by the Denver zoo. Junior, he said, however, has been aloof and unfriendly and not particularly helpful in the project.

Life Never Dull on Fashion Front

'GLOWBALONEY': World map in multi-colored sequins appears on a New York design in black crepe worn by Maggi McNellis.

LEOPARDS AND LEOTARDS: Above, Norell's leopard-trimmed one-strap short evening gown. Right, Claire McCardell's 1943 leotard (long underwear) with wool jumper.

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP Fashion Editor)

Just in case you've been worrying about the regimentation of style under wartime restrictions, I've picked out a few highlights from the New York fall collections to prove that life is never dull on the fashion front.

If you're bored with your trim, practical duration suit, for instance, you may startle your friends by appearing in one of Claire McCardell's "leotards." These are simply 1943 versions of Grandma's revered red flannels, and are worn with both legs and arms proudly showing, with a sleeveless jersey jumper. They come in vivid solid colors and horizontal stripes, and are expected to panic some of our best college campuses this fall.

Then there's Norman Norell's daring evening dress of red velvet, with a lone diagonal shoulder strap of leopard, teamed with a dramatic leopard trench coat. No girl could feel either drab or regimented in such a costume as this.

For the global-minded, there is the restaurant dress called "Glowbaloney," of black crepe with a map of the world in multi-color sequins.

These are extremes of the fall lineup, but they prove that no woman needs to be bored with her wardrobe, even in wartime.

LEAGUE MEMBERS AND CHURCH WOMEN MEET

Post-War Planning Discussed at First Session Held Thursday at Presbyterian Church By Women Voters.

TWENTY-FOUR WOMEN representing various church denominations in the city met with two members of the Richland county League of Women Voters Thursday at the First Presbyterian church for a discussion on "The Prelude to Post-War Planning."

Mrs. A. M. Colby, secretary of the local league, and Mrs. F. D. Boals, a member of the board, led the meeting, explaining the objectives of the Christian program and giving the reading "Recruiting for Peace."

It was decided league members would meet with the church squad leaders every two weeks on Thursday at the First Presbyterian church at 2 p. m. to further the outline for contact with local citizens. The purpose is to arouse interest and a sense of responsibility for government and foreign policy.

Squad leaders were registered yesterday as to their church and also according to the various clubs they represented. It was urged at the session that contact be made with other church organiations to join the group discussions. These women will function as leaders for post-war planning in the churches and later in the various clubs of Mansfield.

This program has been set up by the National League of Women Voters and follows the doctrine of the Federated Council of Churches of America. Catholic and Jewish groups are also included.

The group will meet again Aug. 26 at the Presbyterian church.
